USE OF DRIED BLOOD PLASMA

IN one of a series of comprehensive reports on medical and public health problems following his seven week stay in Great Britain, Capt. Charles S. Stephenson, (MC), USN, told the Secretary of the Navy this week that the use of dried blood plasma for emergency field administration to suffers from shock due to injury and loss of blood has been highly effective in saving life that would otherwise have been lost.

"I studied precise clinical reports in England," Captain Stephenson reported, "and found that the technique is not only successful beyond expectations, but that it can be carried out under conditions of stress and strain on the part of the medical staff which would at first appear impossible.

"The work has been removed from the experimental stage by being thoroughly demonstrated under most adverse conditions. This has been proved conclusively by the British."

As a result of his tour in England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland, during which he was accompanied by Comdr. Edward H. Cushing, (MC), USN, Captain Stephenson is working on a series of exhaustive studies of shock, industrial medicine, problems attendant upon high altitude flying, treatment of burns, and many other subjects.

Captain Stephenson is considered one of the outstanding specialists in Public Health and Preventive Medicine in the Medical Corps of the Navy. He is a graduate of the Columbia University School of Public Health, from which institution he holds a degree of Master of Science in Public Health. He is a member of the Advisory Council to the U. S. Public Health Service and also a member of the Tennessee Valley Authority Malaria Control Commission, and a representative of the Navy Department on the National Research Council. He has been head of the Preventive Medicine Section of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery since 30 June 1936.

During his seven-week stay Captain Stephenson visited the great research centers of Oxford, Cambridge, University of London, University of Edinburgh, University of Glasgow and other medical centers. The tour was made in cooperation with the National Research Council, the Medical Research Council of Great Britain and Canadian Research organizations.

Captain Stephenson stated that the biological laboratories of the United States have equipment for processing blood and preparing dried plasma. These laboratories are now preparing several hundred packages each week and within a month they will be able to process several thousand pints of blood each week. The real problem in the United States is to develop a sufficiently large list of blood donors to permit the work to be carried out effectively.

In connection with the problem of securing donors, Captain Stephenson pointed out that in the city of Birmingham (Please turn to Page 146)

Temporary Promotions Begin in Navy Flag Rank

First exercise of authority under the Navy's new temporary promotion law was employed this week to promote eleven captains of the Navy to the rank of rear admiral.

It was stated that the officers all hold billets rating flag rank. In many instances the President has authorized them to assume the rank, but without actual promotion they were not entitled to pay of the rank.

It is understood, however, that the President has not yet approved the recommendations of the Department relative to the numbers to be promoted in the various grades under the temporary rank act and the procedure to be followed in making the promotions. It is likely that these recommendations embrace largely the promotion of enlisted men and warrant officers to higher grades, as well as some advancement for commissioned officers up to the grade of lieutenant commander. The long delay in approving the recommendations has been a matter of comment. Some believe the report has been recalled for changes.

Ten of the eleven captains nominated to be rear admirals this week had been selected to be rear admirals by regular selection boards. The exception was Capt. Charles W. Fisher, Jr., director of Shore Establishments, a former constructor who has been twice passed over for promotion. Captain Fisher, it will be recalled, was a strong protagonist of former Secretary Edison's plan to reorganize the Navy Department and fought hard before Congressional committees to bring (Please turn to Page 143)

Gen. Marshall Praises Maneuvers

In a message radioed to the participants in the recent field maneuvers between the Second and Third Armies in the Louisiana-Texas area, General George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, declared that the exercises were a "complete success, on the ground, in the air and for the supply and maintenance services."

The message, directed "to all commanders and their officers and non-commissioned officers and to the men in the ranks," stated:

"The maneuvers just completed have been a great success, on the ground, in the air and for the supply and maintenance services. The zeal and energy, the endurance and the spirit of the troops have been a model of excellence. There is much more to learn but the mistakes of the past two weeks will be corrected, the deficiencies in materiel will be made good. The armored units and the air squadrons are now a part of the military team supported by dive bombers of the Navy and Marine Corps. The supply services have proved that they know their business. This new citizen army is rapidly on its way to becoming a powerful machine with all its parts in close cooperation. To all of you and especially to those older men soon to be released from active service my thanks and those of the entire War Department for having done a good job."

General McNair's Talk

Following are the comments by Lt. Gen. L. J. McNair, GSC, at the conclusion of the Second Phase of the GHQ-Directed Maneuvers, at Camp Polk, La., 24-28 Sept. 1941:

"General Lear, General Krueger, Gentlemen: Let me say at the outset that the war (Please turn to Page 144)

Joint Pay Board Moves To Report Next Week

The Interdepartmental Pay Committee, organized by the Secretary of War upon the request of the Senate Military Committee, moved with such unprecedented speed this week that it appears likely it will have its report ready for submission by the end of next week.

Convening of the board was held up by the delay of the Navy in naming its representatives, but as soon as that step was taken (on 8 Oct.) informal meetings were begun for the exchange of basic information and recommendations, then a formal meeting of all representatives was called.

In view of the fact that there has been no overhauling of the pay schedules since 1922 but that there has been numerous amendments, it would appear quite likely that the board may decide to redraft the Joint Pay Act. Such a fundamental revision would serve a much better purpose than the flat percentage increase which has been suggested in Congress and elsewhere.

The complete membership of the Interdepartmental Committee follows:

Army: Brig. Gen. Wade H. Haislip.
Navy: Capt. John F. Shafroth, Jr.
Marine Corps: Col. Harry Schmidt.
Coast Guard: Comdr. Lloyd V. Kielhorn.

Coast and Geodetic Survey: Capt. Robert F. Luce, and Lt. John A. Bond.
Public Health Service: Dr. Paul M. Stewart, and Dr. L. R. Thompson.

The report of the inter-departmental pay board will go to a special sub-committee of the Senate Military Committee of which Senator Edwin C. Johnson, of Colo., has been named chairman.

Senator Johnson will be assisted on the committee by Senators Hill, of Alabama; Downey, of California; Gurney, of South Dakota, and Bridges, of New Hampshire.

All of these men are proponents of increases in service pay. Senator Hill is the author of Senate Resolution 162, pursuant to which the pay study is being made; Senator Johnson and Senator Downey are authors of bills to increase enlisted pay.

The services have other friends on the main Senate committee. The chairman, Senator Reynolds, of N. C., is author of a bill to give Regular officers pay of their temporary grades. Senator Lodge, of Mass., a captain in the Cavalry Reserve, who returned to Washington this week from a two-month tour of service with the 2nd Armored Division, stated upon his return that increased pay for soldiers is among the Army's first needs.

Sub-committee Chairman Johnson said this week that his committee expected to receive drafts of pay legislation from the War Department and to start hearings in about a week. Every phase of the pay question will be gone into, he said, including the objectives sought to be embodied by bills pending in the Senate, one of which is the pay-for-temporary grade bill for Regular officers.

Senator Lodge told a representative of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL that he had heard the subject of pay-for-grade mentioned during his tour, and stated that he thought the request was reasonable (Please turn to Page 145)

Press Comments Favorably on Army Maneuvers, Cites Need for Officers

WHILE many newspaper reporters were writing wind-up stories on the maneuvers between the Second and Third Armies in the Texas-Louisiana area, other reporters this week submitted to their editors preliminary stories on the First Army maneuvers in the Carolinas. Editorial comment on the completed maneuvers is generally favorable, although some editors express dissatisfaction with the deficiency of officers able to lead troop units in the field.

These two thoughts, of praise and dissatisfaction, are expressed in an editorial in the Washington, D. C. Post which says, "The manner in which we allow ourselves to depreciate the quality of our Army should go into the discard after the Battle of Louisiana." Continuing, the Post notes that the British observers at the maneuvers were indeed well pleased with the conduct of America's soldiers. The Post then takes up the officer issue and says, "In the maneuvers, apparently, there was too much tactical caution and too little initiative. The emphasis so far has been chiefly on putting up a tough goal line stand, and not on creating a smoothly coordinated scoring machine."

The Dallas, Tex., News says, "The expansion of the Army and mobilization of citizen soldiers has deprived small units of every veteran officer." The News explains that the new officers have had little field service, but that, "The condition will right itself with time."

The Lima, Ohio, News says, "America has good reason to be proud of her young soldiers of the New Army. We wish there was some way in which the whole country could join, when the maneuvers are over in a single, resounding, 'Well done!'"

Quoting from a news story from the maneuver area by Joseph C. Harsch, famous correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, who was expelled from Germany for his writings, the Spartanburg, S. C., Herald says, "These boys are a finer looking physical type than the German army by far. They have unbounded confidence in themselves. . . . There may be some political defeatists in Washington. But there aren't any soldier defeatists here."

Writing on morale the Rochester, N. Y., Democrat and Chronicle says, "Possibly the one most understandable product of the elaborate military maneuvers in Louisiana is the discovery, confirmed by virtually all the reporters, that the morale of the men in the services is as high as that of any fighting men in our history."

The Newark, N. J., News, commenting on a statement made by Lt. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, chief of staff of GHQ, says, "Troops in the line showed 'devotion, spirit, and putoutiveness' despite the rigors of all out war games. They deserve efficient leadership."

Praising the work of the cavalry and the engineers, the Tulsa, Okla., World and the Des Moines, Iowa, Register, say respectively, "Out of the big practice war in Arkansas, Louisiana, and Texas comes the significant note that the cavalry division was found indispensable. In that swampy country," the World continues, "with so many streams and bayous, horses went where tanks could not go; the cavalrymen opened the way for the light motored divisions and the infantry in places where heavy equipment would stall." "In the joint maneuvers of the Second and Third Armies in Louisiana," the Register begins, "the Second engineers corps threw four pontoon bridges across the Red River within a maximum of 48 hours, which sets a new record for the United States Army." The Register concludes with the paraphrase, "Crossing bridges only a couple days after you come to them is quite an improvement, all right."

As the date for the conclusion of the maneuvers drew close, the Waco, Tex., News-Tribune said, "Officers and men will have acquired invaluable knowledge. Revelation of defects in tactics and disposition will stand revealed so that these may be remedied."

In an editorial which discusses the practical necessity of maneuvers, the New York, N. Y., Herald Tribune says, "During the recent maneuvers, a heavy rain turned the dirt roads in the fighting area into quagmires, and it was necessary to reroute the columns over a few hard-surfaced roads. Quite possibly, in actual warfare, victory might go to the side which was able to perform this operation most expeditiously—something which cannot be learned by correspondence courses, but which demands trained teamwork by every soldier and officer. This teamwork," the Herald Tribune adds, "was what 450,000 troops have been learning in the Louisiana mud."

Air Corps Promotion

A situation has arisen with respect to temporary promotions in the Army Air Forces which may result in the formulation of a new system of promotion by selection in that component of the fighting forces.

Under present conditions, the Air Corps Act of 1936 authorized temporary promotions of Air Corps officers on a strict seniority basis with rank within the Air Corps only. This applies to the field grades. The revised section 127a of the National Defense act, authorizing temporary promotions within the regular Army is applied to the Air Corps only for the purpose of protecting seniority.

Now there is a strong feeling in the Air Forces that some system is necessary to get a larger number of Air Force officers (including those of other arms on duty within the Air Force) into the necessary higher grades. Inasmuch as the selection system is being utilized to accomplish this result in the other arms and services it is quite probable that it would be employed in any change that may be brought about in the Air Corps.

Division of responsibilities between the G-1 Division of the War Department General Staff and the A-1 Division of the Air Staff has been decided upon. Under the Army Air Force set-up, which gives a greater degree of autonomy to the Air component, army duties and responsibilities formerly handled by the War Department General Staff are now transferred to the Air Staff.

The Personnel Division of the War Department General Staff will transfer to the A-1 Division of the Air Staff the functions, duties, and responsibilities as follows:

1. Personnel.—

a. Officers.—

(1) All matters pertaining to Air Corps officers of all components of the Army of the United States, except that G-1 will control promotion, other than Air Corps promotion under Act of 16 June 1936.

(2) All matters pertaining to officers other than Air Corps including Aircraft Warning Service on duty with the Air Corps, except promotion and procurement, which is controlled by G-1, and allotment controlled by G-1 on the recommendation of the Air Staff.

b. All matters pertaining to warrant officers assigned to the Air Corps except that matters relating to appointment in categories which are common to more than one arm or service will be coordinated with G-1.

c. All matters pertaining to nurses, except allotment and procurement, which are controlled by G-1.

d. Enlisted men.—

(1) All matters pertaining to Air Corps enlisted men except procurement, which will be accomplished by The Adjutant General and coordinated through G-1. The Air Staff will inform G-1 of the number of each grade and rating originally set up by the Air Staff within funds appropriated and of any changes thereafter in the total allotment.

(2) All matters pertaining to enlisted men in the Services with the Air Corps, except that the allotment of grades and ratings will be made by G-1 and procurement will be by The Adjutant General, coordinated through G-1.

e. The control of all matters pertaining to civilians, except for those paid from "Incidental Expenses of the Army," which will be controlled by G-1.

2. Miscellaneous matters.—

a. Preparation of legislation sponsored by the War Department and reports of legislation which pertain to matters affecting the Air Forces alone. Legislation affecting the ground forces but of primary interest to the Army Air Forces will be prepared by the Air Staff and submitted to the appropriate division of the General Staff for concurrence.

b. Wearing of the prescribed uniform.—Changes to be submitted to G-1 for concurrence.

c. Opinions requested of The Judge Advocate General relating to personnel to be concurred in by G-1 prior to submission for approval by the Secretary of War.

d. Proposed policies affecting both Air Corps and other Army personnel, regardless of origin, will be concurred in by the Air Staff and G-1.

e. Decorations.—Responsibility for matters pertaining to the Distinguished Flying Cross. For other matters G-1 will retain responsibility.

f. Religious, recreational, welfare, and morale work.—Matters originating in the Air Staff will have the concurrence of G-1. There will be no change in present G-1 responsibility.

g. Red Cross.—Matters originating with the Air Staff must have the concurrence of G-1.

3. Responsibility for estimates for all of the above activities is transferred to the Air Staff.

Army Bands

The regimental band of the 79th Coast Artillery (Anti-Aircraft) has been organized at Fort Bliss, Texas, bringing the total number of Army bands in service to 302.

General Powell Relieved

Maj. Gen. Clifford R. Powell, NGUS, has been relieved of command of the 44th Division, Ft. Dix, N. J., and is expected to be assigned to other duties at that post. General Powell is the third general officer to be ordered from the 44th Division, which is now temporarily commanded by a Regular Army officer, Col. James I. Muir, Inf.

Cruiser Force at Panama

Rear Adm. Frank H. Sadler, commandant of the 15th Naval District, revealed this week that a United States cruiser force, designated as the Panama Naval Coastal Frontier Force, will permanently be based at the Canal Zone. The size of the force was not revealed, but Admiral Sadler said that in addition Panama Pa-na is the discovery, confirmed by virtually all the reporters, that the morale of the men in the services is as high as that of any fighting men in our history."

President to Speak on Navy

President Roosevelt announced at his press conferences yesterday that he will speak to the nation on Navy Day, 27 Oct., on problems of the Navy and total defense. At the same time the President announced that he will broaden the significance of the day in his proclamation which will designate 27 Oct. as "Navy and Total Defense Day." President Roosevelt's address will be delivered at a Navy League dinner at Washington.

New Navy Helmet

A new-type steel helmet designed to give adequate protection to its wearer and at the same time to permit him to use a head-set telephone without interference is now undergoing experiments by the Navy Bureau of Ordnance.

The new Navy helmet, a larger and modified edition of the model recently adopted by the War Department, weighs about four pounds, and is lined with sponge rubber pads. Those whose duties do not embrace the use of telephones aboard ships will use the regulation new-type Army helmet.

Army General Officers

The War Department does not plan to make any more permanent promotion of regular officers to general officer grades. It was learned this week. At present there is one vacancy for major general and nine for brigadier general. However, for the duration of the emergency the needs will be taken care of entirely by temporary promotions.

Army Warrant Officers

The War Department is planning to begin the promotion of present qualified warrant officers to the new grade of chief warrant officer by about 15 Oct. It was stated this week.

The law set 10 years service as a prerequisite for such promotion. It is planned, in addition, to examine each man's record to determine whether he is qualified.

Increase Widows' Pensions

The inadequacy of pensions paid to Service widows was brought to the attention of Congress this week when the House passed three bills increasing the pensions paid to the widows of three flag officers of the Navy.

The bills passed were:

H. R. 4301, increasing the pension paid to Mrs. Imogen Morris Taylor, widow of Rear Adm. David W. Taylor, from $45 to $100 a month.

H. R. 3312, increasing the pension of Mrs. Grizelda Hall Hobson, widow of Rear Adm. Richard Pearson Hobson, from $30 to $100 a month.

H. R. 3500, increasing the pension of Mrs. Jeannette W. Moffett, widow of Rear Adm. William A. Moffett, from $30 to $100.

In each case, the House held that the faithful and valuable services rendered to the nation by the officers entitled their widows to a pension which would enable them to meet expenses.

All three bills were opposed by the Veterans' Administration. Commenting on the proposal to increase Mrs. Moffett's pension, the Veterans' Administrator said, "The long, efficient, meritorious service rendered by Admiral Moffett is well known, and I am sure it is the desire of all persons concerned that the government render every reasonable assistance to his widow and to other widows who have lost their husbands under similar conditions. Because there have arisen from time to time other cases the same or similar to that of Admiral Moffett, I would suggest that the committee might desire to consider a study and preparation of a plan of general legislation by which this type of case when it arises may be accorded uniform beneficial treatment."

Referring to Mrs. Taylor's pension, Administrator Hines said, "Widows of officers who have not attained high rank and widows of enlisted men are often left with minor children to support and educate. . . . The financial crisis which these widows face is usually as great if not greater than that which the widows of high ranking officers must meet. Since the bill, if enacted, would grant relief to Mrs. Taylor which has not been granted to others similarly situated, it is the view of the Veterans' Administration that if relief should be afforded in this type of case it should be accomplished by general legislation so as to avoid discrimination against others similarly situated."

Nearly the same comments were made on the third bill. And for identical reasons the Veterans' Administration opposed all three bills.

Small Craft for Navy

Legislation to authorize construction or acquisition of 400 small craft suitable for use as patrol vessels, minesweepers and similar purposes was requested this week by Secretary of the Navy Knox.

In response to the request, the House Naval Affairs Committee reported H. R. 5783, authorizing appropriation of not to exceed $300,000,000 for the vessels, and delegated two of its members to go before the House Rules Committee to request a rule for the legislation.

Asking the legislation, Secretary of the Navy Knox said, "The Navy Department is confronted by a great shortage of naval small craft of the various types needed by the naval local defense forces. The shortage of patrol vessels is particularly acute." The secretary estimated cost of the vessels at not more than $300,000,000, of which not more than $15,000,000 would be required during the remainder of this fiscal year.

In testimony before the Naval Committee, Navy heads pointed out that 777 vessels of this type were already in service or building, and that the new authorization would increase this total to 1,177. During the World War there were 1,400 vessels of this category in service, it was said.

The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Navy "to undertake the construction of or to acquire and convert not to exceed 400 miscellaneous light-draft vessels and small craft of such sizes, types and designs, suitable for local defense use as patrol vessels, minesweepers and the like, as he may consider best suited for the purposes of national defense, such vessels to be in addition to those heretofore authorized."

New Arlington Annex Ready

The Navy Department announced this week that plans have been completed for the occupation of the new annex in Arlington, Va. Beginning Saturday, 11 Oct. the moving of various offices from the Constitution Avenue building will take place under the supervision of the Federal Works Agency. The tentative schedule is as follows: Security Division, Office of the Secretary, 11 Oct.; Headquarters, U. S. Marine Corps, 13 Oct.; Naval Records and Library, Third week in Oct.; Bureau of Navigation, Third week in Oct.; Naval Dispensary, Branch, Last week in Oct.

In addition to the above, there will also be certain offices of the War Department housed in the new building. A modern up-to-date cafeteria, sufficient for the estimated 3,500 personnel, will be in operation within the next few days.

The Arlington Annex was constructed by the Public Buildings Administration. It embodies the latest improvements in this type of construction and was designed to provide the maximum office space for the amount of ground covered. The building contains approximately 450,000 square feet of floor space, of which some 200,000 square feet will be occupied by the Bureau of Navigation, 120,000 square feet by the Marine Corps, and 112,000 square feet by the War Department offices.

The space being vacated in the Navy Department building will be utilized to provide urgently needed room for the remaining offices.

Army Maneuver Critique

was halted, not by the tactical situation, but by the calendar. The response by the men in this and preceding maneuvers has been so fine that it was felt compelling to complete the training today as scheduled. Consequently it was considered essential to conclude the field work on Sunday.

"It seems unnecessary and inappropriate here today to dwell on details. You all have absorbed a mass of criticism during the maneuver season now ended, and probably know your faults better than anyone else. Although voluminous detailed comments on the second phase could be compiled, it is felt that those on the first phase will suffice. While there was improvement, that is, fewer faults, the mass of deficiencies were repeated to some degree at least. Nor was it to be expected otherwise, for faults are not remedied overnight. Time is required, especially if the faults are deep-seated or are the result of weak discipline.

Battle of Bridges

"All great battles are named sooner or later. This one should be called the Battle of Bridges. If there is any one lesson which stands out above all others, it is the decisive influence of destroyed bridges. In spite of outstandingly intense and effective efforts by the engineers, it was demonstrated that destruction is vastly easier than repair. The best course seems clearly to lie in prevention of destruction, rather than repair after destruction. We have swift transportation and great fire power. The seizure of routes logically should be the first step of a force which contemplates a swift advance. It is folly to start the movement of large bodies of troops until the route is secure, for the net result is to place the troops on the road—subjecting them to destruction—with no compensating advantage, no progress. The enemy cannot destroy all routes completely in any reasonable time. If covering forces are pushed forward on a wide front—light, swift, and invisible—practically all routes can be reconnoitered simultaneously. If it proves possible to seize certain routes entirely and prevent destruction, then a swift advance by large forces is feasible. If there is no route left open, one or more can be selected and prepared before large bodies of troops are started in motion. The mere fact that many routes are reconnoitered is of itself no violation of secrecy, since the particular ones to be used still are unknown to the enemy. The logic of such a general procedure seems unassailable, yet there were repeated violations of any such conception, resulting in countless traffic jams which in war would have resulted in inevitable and indefensible slaughter. The old principle that a route must be secured before it is used become a must and a first under the conditions we have seen in this maneuver.

Forehanded Measures

"There were many isolated cases of violation of destroyed bridges by both Blue and Red. Proper umpire decisions were nullified later by partisan umpires. The initial complaint by Blue that Red had prepared demolitions within its proper area before the maneuver started is groundless. No restrictions were imposed on Red in this connection, and its forehanded measures were not only not unfair but were praiseworthy.

"There were a great mass of missing identifications, both personnel and vehicles. Again there were improper identifications in armored units, and in certain cases confusion and unfairness resulted. It is estimated that seventy-five percent of identifications were missing in one division. While some of the causes of this condition are appreciated, the dominant aspect is lack of discipline and effective command.

"The crossing of the Sabine by the provisional armored corps was a fine feat, although the maneuver ended before the advantage could be exploited. However, it is natural to inquire why the river was not guarded more thoroughly by Red with some or all of certain elements available for the purpose, especially since Blue's presence in force west of the Sabine was well known to Red. The mere destruction of highway bridges certainly could not be relied upon for complete security.

"The validity of the advance by the 41st Infantry into Shreveport has been questioned. Study of the matter leads me to believe that this action was umpired soundly, at least in essentials. The Blue success was due, not so much to numbers, as to skillful maneuvering and massing the fire of every available weapon. The results were a proper recognition of actions which should be emulated widely.

"The reservation as to supply, which I voiced after the first phase on account of prior preparations, is retracted with pleasure. The essential effectiveness of supply was an outstanding feature of the maneuvers. The magnitude of the problem alone was sufficient to warrant apprehension as to whether the troops would be supplied adequately. Combat commanders and the services alike deserve the highest praise for the results achieved.

Command and Leadership

"A word of comment as to quotations by the Press of my comments. Most prominent perhaps is in connection with command and leadership. I feel emphatically that leadership and command can and must be improved—and I refer to no particular echelon. On the other hand, it would be unfair to create an impression that all leadership is bad, for there are a host of fine leaders actually exercising responsible command while many other potentially fine leaders have not yet had a real opportunity to exercise the leadership of which they are capable. So far as I know, no drastic purge of weak leaders is contemplated, although the issue undoubtedly has been clarified in many cases by performance during these maneuvers—the fairest test short of war itself. It seems reasonable and probable that leadership will be improved by removal of weak officers as developments warrant in each case. Our troops deserve the best possible military leadership. Where a weak leader can be replaced by a strong one, the necessary action certainly should be forthcoming without hesitation on the part of higher commanders, as soon as the situation is clear. And time is fleeting.

"The completion of these maneuvers closes a major cycle of training. Troop units have been carried through essentially all stages of training to a culmination in these great games. What comes next? The answer lies in the masses of faults which commanders of all echelons have brought out time after time, and which must be corrected as soon as possible. The existence of such defects by no means merits condemnation; they were to be expected, for finished troops cannot be produced in one year. If only defects are appreciated and there is a resolve to eliminate them, a most important start has been made. Many faults have their root in discipline. There is no question that many of the weaknesses developed in these maneuvers are repeated again and again for lack of discipline. Our troops are capable of the best of discipline. If they lack it, leadership is faulty. A commander who cannot develop proper discipline must be replaced.

Low Training Ceiling

"Other faults—a mass of them—are due to the comparatively low training ceiling of officers. Basically the instructor of a unit is its commander. The unit can be no better than the commander is able to make it. If the commander himself is unable to instruct in the essential subjects of training, he is unable to command adequately. No commander can expect to have a perfect unit handed to him; he must build it. If he is incapable of building it, he cannot maintain its perfection even if inherited initially. A unit never stands still. Either it improves or it slips. The commander determines which. Thus our major initial task of the postwar period is basic training of a higher order than any attained heretofore. But unless the training ceiling of officers is raised, there will be no material lifting of standards and no material correction of the faults developed so clearly in these maneuvers.

"Gentlemen, as we close these great maneuvers, and disperse the forces which have fought them, I want to express, even though inadequately, my gratitude for the mighty efforts which all of you have made and which have made the action so real and so intense. The thanks of General Marshall have been communicated to you. You have earned richly the praise which the Press has given and which undoubtedly expresses the feelings of our people. You have justified the cost of the maneuvers in training value received. You have strengthened faith in the Army in the hearts of all thinking Americans. All success to you in your further efforts.

"Appreciation also is due the Press. All elements—news, pictures, and radio—strive only to give the true picture, and it was a very real picture. The members who covered the maneuvers accepted restrictions cheerfully, lived with the troops, and earned in many ways the respect and gratitude of us all. We hope that they will come to see us often."

Signal Corps Notes

Signal Corps officers are busy in a study of the gains registered in communications during the past year. An intensive study of the recent Louisiana-Texas maneuvers is under way, and officials are assured that signal communications have been substantially improved during the past year and predict even greater gains during the forthcoming months.

Unceasing effort on the part of officers, enlisted technicians, and research experts has provided a fairly standardized set of communications equipment that is already or shortly will be coming from factories in mass production. This equipment, officers say, will soon be in ample quantity for the Army, regardless of its expansion.

Probably one of the best examples of the forward movement of the Corps, it is stated, is evidenced in new-type radio sender and receiver sets that operate to a great extent by push-button, thus providing the Army with equipment that requires the minimum of training by operators. New designs for tank, plane, and other vehicular radio, have already been drafted.

At the present time procurement of trained personnel is one of the Corps' greatest difficulties. Radio technicians are badly needed. So are electronic engineers and other technicians; however a recruiting drive has been opened in the electronic field that is designed to provide 500 new officers of this category to man air-craft warning stations.

Lt. Gen. Ben Lear, Commanding General, Second Army, has issued a special order commending the 50th Signal Battalion and 275th Signal Construction Company for performing signal duties during the Louisiana maneuvers. The text of General Lear's statement follows:

"The Army Commander desires to commend the 50th Signal Battalion with the 275th Signal Construction Company attached for their excellent and efficient work in installing, maintaining and operating the signal communications of the Army Headquarters during the 1941 maneuvers in Arkansas and Louisiana.

"The members of this command both officers and enlisted men, have worked continuously during the entire two months of the maneuvers constantly under strain to complete their tasks on time with little if any periods of rest. The fact that they have performed this strenuous duty for so long a time, willingly and cheerfully without regard for their personal comfort, is indicative of a devotion to duty and high morale on the part of the organization and a high degree of leadership on the part of the commander."

Lt. Col. John C. Grable, representing General Olmstead, acting Chief of Signal Corps, will address a meeting of representatives of Independent Telephone Association at Chicago, Ill., on Friday, 17 Oct. The subject of Colonel Grable's address will be "Wire Communications." The meeting is the annual national convention of the Independent Telephone Association.

Orders have been issued by the War Department transferring Lt. Col. Frank E. Stoner, V Army Corps Signal Officer, to Third Army Headquarters in San Antonio, Tex., where he will become Chief Signal Officer of the Third Army commanded by Lt. Gen. Walter Krueger.

U. S. COAST GUARD

TESTIMONY of a delegation of Coast Guard officials led by Rear Adm. Russell R. Waesche, commandant, and which included Rear Adm. H. F. Johnson, engineer-in-chief; Comdr. F. J. Gorman, chief finance officer; Comdr. J. N. Helner, assistant chief finance officer; Lt. Comdr. R. N. Lank; Lt. Comdr. E. H. Thiele; and Mr. W. H. Carroll, chief pay clerk, before the subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee considering the 1942 Supplemental National Defense Appropriation was released this week. The Coast Guard has requested approximately $25,000,000 to meet the costs of additional personnel, of new construction, and of additional aids to navigation.

Admiral Waesche told the committee that the greatly expanded program of the Coast Guard necessitates hiring 48 additional civilian clerks; commissioning 505 officers; and enlisting 5,914 men. He also explained that $48,017 would be required for increased pay and allowances of certain commissioned officers. Whereas formerly a promoted Coast Guard officer received an increase in pay only if he had the required years of service, as a result of the act of 24 July, 1941, promotion of a Coast Guard officer means an automatic increase in pay, regardless of years in service.

In the matter of the 505 additional officers, it was explained that of this number, 323 will be taken from the service, while 179 additional Reserve officers will be appointed. Thus more than 300 chief warrant, warrant officers and enlisted men in the Coast Guard would be temporarily advanced to commissioned grade for the duration of the emergency. A breakdown of this promotion plan follows: 107 chief warrant officers to commissioned lieutenants; 72 chief warrant officers to commissioned lieutenants (jg); 73 warrant officers to commissioned lieutenants (jg); 174 warrant officers to be ensigns; 102 vacancies to be filled in the grade of lieutenant; 57 vacancies to be filled in the grade of lieutenant (jg); and 20 vacancies to be filled in the grade of ensign.

A breakdown of the 5,914 additional enlisted men requested reveals that 1,732 are needed to replace those withdrawn from Coast Guard fleet to man naval transports; 116 to replace men withdrawn to man the North Star, vessel transferred from the Interior Department to the Coast Guard for patrol duties in Greenland; 335 to man 5 weather patrol ships; 100 to man 10 83-foot cutters; 1,069 for landing party boats; 70 for 7 monitoring stations; 740 for specialized training; 138 to man tenders; 16 for aviation repair bases; 150 for signal stations; 48 to man the Nourmahal, yacht turned over to the Coast Guard reserve by Vincent Astor, and 1,400 to man 200 small boats.

Additional funds for Coast Guard construction were necessary, Admiral Waesche explained, as a result of an expanded construction program and an increase in the costs of construction since estimates were first made. He said that the additional appropriation for construction would provide funds for two cutters, of the tender class, to replace the tenders Amaranth and Magnolia, $1,030,000; for the completion of six cutters of the tender class, $340,745; for four additional vessels for duty in Greenland, $2,995,000; for a 5,000 ton ice-breaker to cost $10,000,000; and for 100 37-38-foot boats and 100 55-60-foot boats, $4,250,000.

For establishing and improving aids to navigation, the Coast Guard has requested $436,200, which would be used to establish these aids at the bases taken over from Great Britain and in Greenland.

Answering a question put him by one of the committee members, Admiral Waesche revealed that the Coast Guard is today approximately 35 per cent a part of the Navy. It was explained, however, that the Coast Guard is maintaining units now under the Navy in the same manner as if they were still under the Treasury Department—only difference being that operating orders are issued by the Navy.

Bolstered by a 48-0 victory over the Worcester Tech football team on Saturday, 4 Oct., the Coast Guard Academy eleven meets the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute gridders at Troy, N. Y., today.

The Academy soccer team, which last Saturday defeated the Worcester booters 2-0 plays Clark University at New London, Conn., today. Completing what turned out to be a Coast Guard field day, the Academy cross country team defeated the Worcester Tech harriers 21-36, despite the fact that the winner of the race was Hunt, of Worcester.

Coast Guard officials announced this week that as of 7 Oct., the Coast Guard Auxiliary had 217 vessels and a personnel of 1128. Original goal is 270 vessels.

ham, England, alone there are more than 18,000 registered donors. In this country, Baltimore has made the leading effort and 5,000 bleedings have been registered. In England, he said, the Army Blood Depot maintains teams of "blood takers" with the personnel and equipment transported by truck from town to town and through the country-side, making periodic calls upon the registered blood donors. This system has been very productive, he stated.

Captain Stephenson traced the development of the procedure for building up a large reserve of dried plasma for use in civil catastrophes and in time of war. This reserve, he said, must be developed and prepared in advance, so as to be ready for immediate use when the emergency arises.

The American Red Cross is conducting a program for building up a blood plasma bank for use of the armed forces of the nation, with sufficient reserve for civilian catastrophe aid. The program has been established in seven cities and is soon to be expanded to a total of 22 chapters. The American Red Cross already has completed a bank of 15,000 blood plasma units and expects to build the initial bank to 200,000 units.

"In England the blood and blood plasma bank has been the means of saving thousands of lives of civilians, who would have died had it not been possible to have administered the blood plasma under field conditions," Captain Stephenson said. "It has been of tremendous value in military operations, both in the field and in the hospitals where the wounded have been taken."

Due to the delicacy of the operation involved in regard to having proper blood types available and in developing a technique which could be carried out under the hectic conditions of the battle field or in a bomb-torn city, the major problem at first was to perfect both a means of handling the blood bank and the stored blood and blood plasma and to evolve methods of handling the blood and plasma under what would normally be far from the desired aseptic conditions.

Both have been accomplished, and the results in saving of life have more than justified the effort, Captain Stephenson said.

In tracing the general development of blood plasma for use in the armed services, Captain Stephenson outlined the following steps:

1. It was first necessary to build up a large blood bank. At first this was done by getting fluid banks of each of the types of blood in the International Blood Grouping. These banks were preserved under controlled temperature conditions—and were effective for a period of at least 12 days.

2. It was then found that if the blood was not used within the 12-day period the liquid portion of the blood (plasma) could be siphoned off and pooled into one large pool. Smaller bottles filled from this pool could be used without regard for blood types as the isoagglutines present in the blood are neutralized by pooling.

3. Later it was discovered that if the plasma was frozen at a temperature below zero Fahrenheit and dried from the frozen state by means of a high vacuum it could be stored for as long as nine years.

4. Drying of the blood plasma resulted from complicated experiments in separating the cellular elements of blood under centrifugal force and the desire to solve the problem of reducing the bulk of material to be handled in shipment and under field or emergency conditions.

The results have been most satisfactory, Captain Stephenson pointed out. Dried plasma is now produced by the biological laboratories, packaged with the proper amount of distilled water to restore the essential fluidity and in its present form is available for immediate use under any possible condition of operation, either in hospitals or in the midst of the turmoil of battle or a bombing raid on a crowded city.

Charleston Navy Yard

A number of projects completed at the Charleston, South Carolina, Navy Yard by the Work Projects Administration have greatly increased the Yard's facilities for ship construction and for accommodation of increased personnel incident to the national defense program.

Employing hundreds of workers during the past six years this improvement program has built as one of its most important projects a new concrete ship-building way. Other projects include a fitting-out pier, erection of several workshops and storehouses, construction of officers' living quarters, renovations and additions to old buildings, and erection of a new 200-bed hospital, which project is currently in progress. Another project provided the addition of considerable area to the Yard by the reclamation of adjacent waste land.

The new shipbuilding way is modern in every respect, with double cranes, transformer vaults, welding platforms and other equipment in line with modern practice. It is 600 feet long, sufficient for the simultaneous construction of two destroyers, or one cruiser. Total cost of the shipway was $1,300,000.

A fitting-out pier, built at a cost of $450,000, provides berthing space for ships undergoing the large amount of work that takes place between launching and final completion of ships.

A pipe shop, electric shop, and sheet metal shop, all of reinforced concrete, were erected by WPA, in addition to ten new storehouses having a total capacity of nearly five million cubic feet, and a general storehouse 320 feet long and 60 feet wide, with platforms for railroad and truck loading.

Ten modern buildings will provide housing for the greatly increased officer personnel now stationed at the Yard. The Old Seaman's Barracks were renovated and restored, and recreational facilities, including a golf course, swimming pool, tennis court and baseball diamond were provided by WPA.

Accommodations for increased administration and office personnel were provided by construction of two annex wings to the administration building, and enlargement of the Yard cafeteria to feed 300 persons.

Thirty acres were added to the area of the Yard by the reclamation of adjacent waste land. Six miles of earth dikes were thrown around the tract and hydraulic fill pumped in. Sixteen miles of 20-foot road was built on the area, with new railroad lines, power lines and sewers.

Construction of a 200-bed Naval hospital is the largest WPA project now in operation at the Charleston Yard. Completion of this will relieve a shortage of hospital accommodations that has existed for some time. This is a reinforced concrete structure consisting of two main buildings, an administration building and a subsistence building, each flanked by ward buildings, all connected by enclosed corridors.

New Navy Ordnance Plant

Secretary of the Navy Knox and Rear Adm. W. H. P. Blandy, Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, accompanied by Navy Ordnance officials, will participate in ceremonies 28 Oct., marking the acquisition by the Navy of another huge ordnance plant. The plant, costing $20,350,000, is at Centerline, Michigan, near Detroit, and will be operated for the Navy by the Hudson Car Co., Detroit.

The new plant will be utilized for the machining of miscellaneous small parts for mounts, directors, torpedo tubes and other ordnance equipment; for minor assemblies in conjunction therewith; and also the manufacture of 20mm machine guns except gun barrels. The plant will have approximately 5,000 employees.

Navy to Assist O. P. M.

Orders implementing the Navy's objective of widening and speeding up subcontracting of National Defense production were issued this week by Under Secretary of the Navy, James Forrestal. The orders directed that commandants of the continental Naval Districts take immediate steps to procure suitable additional officer personnel that may be needed for the Naval Advisory Service to Field Offices of the Contract Distribution Division of the Office of Production Management.

Under Secretary Forrestal explained in the orders that the additional officer personnel for the advisory work should be obtained either by transfer from other activities or by induction of civilians into the Naval Reserve. Qualifications would in so far as possible include a combination of naval and civilian industrial experience.

These officers will coordinate the relations of all Navy activities within their districts with the local offices of the Division of Contract Distribution, and will render consulting advice and assistance to local officials of the Division of Contract Distribution to facilitate the work of that office. Under Secretary Forrestal's directive outlines other duties for the offices of the Naval Inspection Service, all designed to facilitate National Defense production.

OUR PRIORITY LIST

1. Legislative assurance, now, that our land, sea, and air forces will be maintained at such strengths as may be determined by the War Department General Staff and the General Board of the Navy to be necessary to guard the nation and its interests against any enemy or combination of enemies.
2. Upward revision of pay schedules for commissioned, warrant and enlisted personnel, active and retired; all temporarily promoted officers to receive pay of grade in which serving.
3. A long range study by the General Board of the Navy to the end that an equitable and just system of promotion for the line and staff of the Navy and Marine Corps be enacted into law.
4. Revision of pension laws to assure service widows a living income.
5. Compensation for service personnel who use privately owned automobiles on government business.

THE "Kindergarten" stage of military training now is definitely completed. The extensive field maneuvers held in the Louisiana-Texas area, the exercises being pursued by the First Army, and the war games held by the other Armies and in the Departments outside the continental United States, in addition to their vital function of training and the seeking out of weaknesses, are serving to weld the various units into compact and confident Corps and Armies. The troops are returning to their home posts with a new conception of their strength, and a determination to correct their deficiencies. During the past year the Army has gone through a trying and difficult ordeal marked by the organization of individuals and units, while at the same time it was engaged in building accommodations, and procuring the necessary training equipment and weapons. These "growing pains" are over, and from the maneuvers is emerging an Army instead of a collection of individuals. Whereas in the early stages the units were hampered by the necessity of instructing recruits, they are now free to pursue their higher "team" training because replacement centers deliver graduates of the school of the soldier to them. Qualified military observers report that the maneuvers to date have revealed that the supply systems functioned beyond expectation, that the problem of handling men, replacements, etc., has been solved, that there has been a vast improvement in the higher echelons of command, particularly corps and armies, and that the response of the men to their training, in most instances, has been excellent. To freshen them up after their ordeal in the field the men will receive furloughs, and then will begin the task of correcting defects. The gratifying fact to the Army and the citizenry is that the period which seemed so chaotic, is over, and that from it is developing the fighting force the nation needs for its defense.

OVER the objection of the Administration, the House of Representatives this week passed three private bills increasing the pensions of widows of Navy flag officers who served their country with distinction. These worthy women, who shared the hardships of the service with their husbands are now receiving pensions amounting to only $30 and $40 a month. Commendably, the House measure is designed to increase this sum to $100 a month in each instance. While welcoming the House's action, the Service also hopes for the immediate enactment of the recommendation of the Veterans' Administration that Congress make a study of widows' pensions, and prepare a plan of general legislation. The opposition of the Veterans' Administration to the special private bills was based on "the fact that widows of officers who have not attained high or highest rank are often left with minor children to support and educate—and this is true of widows of enlisted men—who because of the lower pay income of their husbands have been unable to build a fund to adequately provide for their economic needs when death terminates the husband's income." Aside from the fundamental reason that proper provision for widows is a matter of simple human justice, there is the further consideration that the morale of the military personnel would be greatly enhanced if they were assured that their dependents would be adequately cared for after their demise. Lacking any more positive move by the Administration, Congress should initiate upon its own responsibility, the proper measures to alleviate the plight of service widows. Individual cases which come to the notice of the committees bear out the need for a general revision of the pension laws. Certainly the legislators do not consider the present low scale sufficient to care for these worthy relics of the defenders of the nation. It should be remembered that the present pension scale does not approach the income promised to those who fall within the scope of the Social Security Act, from the benefits of which service personnel are excluded.

ASK THE JOURNAL

SEND your queries to the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL QUESTION EDITOR and an answer will be given in this column as soon as possible after receipt.

N. E. H.—Due to the present emergency and attacks on shipping, Army transport sailing schedules are no longer made public. Since, you yourself have a legitimate reason for learning such information, you should make your request to the Quartermaster General through channels. We are assured a prompt reply will be made.

M. H. P.—Since the present emergency threatens to be of long duration, the War Department is giving little thought to measures to protect enlisted seniority of men now serving under Reserve officer commissions. Of course, the present system of making all enlisted promotions on a temporary basis will enable you to preserve your seniority to a certain extent.

S. J. G.—Whether a Reserve officer coverage in grade for troop assignment should continue his military education is in the final analysis a question he must decide for himself. We can only point out at this time that, in view of the decision of the War Department to place every Regular officer possible on troop duty, there should soon be increased opportunities for Reserve officers to obtain active duty for assignment to non-troop duty. It is suggested you submit application for such duty.

W. R. and M. J. P.—An enlisted man who wishes to change his name must signify this intention to his immediate commanding officer, and must have either a birth or baptismal certificate in addition to an affidavit signed by his parents or two other persons testifying that they know the correct name to be identified with the soldier.

PIPE PENALIZED FOR "ROUGHING"

—but Harry's out of the dog house now!

ANOTHER TOUCHDOWN! Yep—Harry's team looks good today. But his pipe smells bad—very bad—especially to the pretty young stranger next to him. Hey, look! She's fainting!

HURRY UP, DOC! That stinko smoke knocked her over like a tackle from behind! You'd think a college grad would know better than to ruin a good pipe with such rank tobacco.

IF SHE'S OKAY, how about some first aid for that pipe, too? Good. The doctor recommends Sir Walter—the mildest, best-smelling blend of burleys ever sniffed in a stadium.

WHO WON THE GAME? Well, she looks happy. And he does, too. So the winner must be: Sir Walter! Try this fragrant tobacco. Your friends will compliment you on the choice.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—Doubtless many reasons inspired the latest speech which Hitler made at Berlin, but the more important, it is easy to infer, were the necessity of building up German morale, holding in line his Allies and the remaining neutrals, and bringing the hopelessness of revolt home to the conquered peoples. Therefore his prediction of an impending gigantic victory which would prostrate Russia, his explanation of the underestimate of Soviet plane and tank strength, which the General Staff had made, and which prevented the quick conquest he had anticipated, and his emphasis upon German might to impress the Nations fighting with him and those whose support, or at least, benevolent neutrality, he is seeking. If events justify his prediction, and the Russian Army organizations be destroyed, the triumph will bring about a new swing to the Axis orbit. If complete victory continue to elude his grasp, and the Russian Armies, although surrendering territory, prove themselves able to keep in the field, the world will compare what success he shall have achieved with his forecast and count the campaign as a defeat, and his Allies and Satellites will be more cautious in their conduct, and the spirit of revolt will be encouraged in the countries under his heel.

It follows that the progress of Hitler's military machine is being followed with absorbing interest in all Capitals. It is agreed he must have had excellent intelligence as to the remaining strength the Russians possess. The successes to date indicate as much. But it is pointed out that the Fuehrer and his advisors admit that when the invasion was ordered, they were mistaken as to the extent of the Soviet equipment, and the resistance it enabled, and it is possible they may be mistaken again. Probably this thought is in the minds of the German people to whom their leader announced the error, which has cost them heavily in sons and brothers killed and wounded, and if the glowing promise he now has made be not realized, there will be a measureable fall in his prestige at home, as there is certain to be abroad.

Already the continuance of fighting in Russia is having its effect upon Governments and peoples. Berlin has acknowledged officially the execution of Czech leaders and of French civilians in occupied France, and of new restrictions imposed in Belgium, Holland and Norway. From Roumania via Turkey come reports of the execution of Roumanian Generals who opposed continuance of their country in the war. Bulgaria is persisting in what her Government describes as a policy of neutrality. Turkey has deferred to 1943 the delivery of increased quantities of chromium to the Reich, and is refusing to permit the passage of belligerent ships through the Dardanelles. Hitler, himself, stated that the relations of his Government with Japan had "improved," a statement which shows he was dissatisfied with the attitude of the Tokyo Government, and that it by no means yet has attained a stage which means implementation of the Triple Alliance. To return to Europe, probably the Fuehrer is gravely concerned about Finland. It is true the government at Helsinki has rejected the British warning that unless it cease hostilities and evacuate Russian territory, London would be forced to war against it. But it is also true the Finnish reply claimed the war against the Soviets was one of defense and "without political obligations," obviously an expression of unwillingness to regard all of Germany's enemies as its own. It is not likely this attitude is agreeable to Hitler. Nor agreeable to him is the action of Secretary Hull this week in notifying Helsinki of American concern at Finland's participation in a general war. This, in effect, supports the British viewpoint. It is not seen how the Finns can refuse continued cooperation with the Germans, but should they do so, should they withdraw to the boundary their country had prior to their war with the Soviets in 1939, Hitler would be forced to move against them, and there would be repercussions throughout Scandinavia, and probably in other regions. Here again the Finnish course probably will be dictated by the results of the current German operations in Russia.

There no longer is any doubt that the President will be granted authority by Congress to provide Lend-Lease aid for Russia. The Administration was concerned over the possibility that a ban on such aid would be adopted at the Capitol. It feared such action might cause Stalin to listen to a German peace suggestion. But the House this week refused by a large majority to withhold aid from the Soviets under a bill that expands the lending authority of the RFC by $1.5 billions. When the new Lend-Lease aid appropriation bill comes before the House, it is predicted that by equally as large a majority there will be defeated a proposal to prohibit the use for Russia of any of the moneys it grants. In return for our assistance, the Administration expects Stalin will issue a decree enforcing the Soviet Constitutional provision regarding the freedom of Religion. It is alleged the decree will mean little, but whether this be so or not it will be of interest to the Vatican as well as to Washington, and in this connection has been discussed at the White House by Ambassador Taylor, who has just returned from audiences with the Pope.

The sinking of the American owned, Panamanian registered, tanker, I. C. White, by a submarine in the South Atlantic followed by the order of the Panamanian Government forbidding the armament of vessels sailing under its flag, is helpful to the passage by Congress of the President's recommendation for modification of the Neutrality Act, which substantially will mean its repeal. The President is determined that Lend-Lease goods shall proceed direct to their destination, and helpful to this end will be the provision of guns and gunners for merchantmen, and the adoption of his secondary recommendation for the elimination of combat zones. It is regretted in Washington that the Panamanian Government showed its disapproval of the policy favored by the President, but this attitude is expected to change as a result of the flight of President Arias, and his succession by Senor Guardia, second Vice President, who reputedly favors collaboration with the United States.

Selection of Colonels—The Board for the selection of lieutenant colonels of the Regular Army for promotion to the grade of colonels has rendered its report and it is understood that the selections will shortly be approved by the Secretary. There will be a total of 100 lieutenant colonels designated for temporary promotion to colonel, plus a number equal to the attrition since the last promotions to that grade. In November, 100 more will be selected for advancement, 100 more in December, and approximately the same number in January, in each instance plus the number lost by attrition. Thus by January the number of permanent colonels authorized by law (705) will be increased, through the temporary rank act, by 600 bringing the number of colonels (permanent and temporary) in the Regular Army to a total of 1,305. Thereafter, until a change of policy is decided upon, the number will be maintained at that figure by a combination of promotions under the permanent policy, plus the necessary number by temporary promotions.

Naval Shore Establishments—Rear Adm. Ben Moreell, USN, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, announced this week the nine August winners of 129 competing Naval shore establishments for outstanding progress in public works undertaking.

Winners of Group one, establishments with a monthly expenditure of more than $600,000, were Naval Fuel Depot, Pearl Harbor, T. H.; Naval Operating Base, Guantanamo, Cuba; and Naval Supply Depot and Naval Dry Dock Facilities, Bayonne, N. J. Group two winners, establishments with a monthly expenditure of more than $300,000, were Destroyer Base, San Diego, Calif.; Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla.; and Navy Yard, Washington, D. C.

Group three winners, establishments with a monthly expenditure of less than $300,000 were Naval Reserve Aviation Base, Robertson, Md.; Naval Air Station, Banana River, Fla.; and Auxiliary Repair Dry Dock No. 2, Twelfth Naval District, San Francisco, Calif.

Rules covering the contest take into consideration location of the competing stations, quantity and quality of labor from the local supply available, peculiar local conditions and special construction problems, the availability of sites for construction and the general priority ratings given the materials going into construction.

Infantry—Col. Paul J. Mueller, Chief of the Training Section, Office of the Chief of Infantry, assumed additional duties as acting-Executive officer this week with the transfer of Col. Maxon S. Lough to foreign service.

The Infantry last week conducted final tests on the several new carbines that have been submitted to the Army for approval. The tests, held at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Aberdeen, Md., was attended by the leading arms experts of the Infantry, including Maj. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges. General Hodges personally fired the new "baby rifles." Recommendations toward the final adoption of one of the new guns were immediately forwarded to the Ordnance Department and it is expected that an announcement of the gun chosen will be made in the near future.

Lt. Col. Sterling A. Wood, of the faculty of the Infantry School, Ft. Benning, Ga., has reported for temporary duty in the Office of the Chief of Infantry in connection with training matters.

A new training film, entitled "Use of Cover in Concealment" is being completed at the Infantry School, Ft. Benning, Ga. The film is designed to acquaint the individual soldier with the camouflage found in natural surroundings. The film was reviewed by General Hodges this week who expressed satisfaction with it.

Maj. W. G. Johnson has returned to duty in the Training Section, Office of the Chief of Infantry, after a month's temporary duty at the Infantry School in connection with training activities.

Col. Otto Lange, formerly of Camp Wolters, Tex., and Lt. Col. R. E. Vermette, formerly at Camp Croft, S. C., reported this week for a brief tour of duty in the Office of the Chief of Infantry, and left on Friday for the new Replacement Training Center, at Camp Crowder, Neosho, Mo. Colonel Lange has been designated as executive of the new center, while Colonel Vermette will be Plans and Training officer.

Marine Corps—A new program of Spanish instruction for officers and enlisted personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps stationed in Washington will be inaugurated to replace the current classes. The new program has been specifically prepared for military personnel and is designed for more progressive instruction in the minimum time. Enrollment is voluntary, however attendance should be regular. Lt. (jg) Ralph A. Sentman, USN-Ret., Officer in Charge, Spanish Language Instruction, is handling enrollment details.

The new Marine Corps base at New River, S. C., was officially dedicated last week with formal raising of the colors at Moutfort Point. Among those who attended the ceremonies were: Col. D. L. S. Brewster, commanding officer; Maj. F. W. Hopkins, Lt. David Ruffin, Lt. Fred C. Hill, Capt. F. N. Reeve, Lt. A. E. Dubber, Sgt. John A. Miller, Capt. Oscar C. Kelley, Lt. Col. Schneirson, and an armed platoon. Approximately 2,200 Marines were "on deck" at the new barracks last week and some 1,500 were expected to arrive at the new base this week.

The Division of Public Relations, Headquarters, U. S. Marine Corps, headed by Brig. Gen. Robert L. Denig, aside from handling numerous press releases, arranging radio programs, answering questions, handling recruiting matters, and the like, still finds time now and then for consideration of human interest material. This week the office was in possession of a good yarn that proves the adeptness and fortitude of the individuals of the "leather-neck corps." By way of an official communication it was reported that a recruiting officer in the field, one chilly day last week, came across a recruiting sergeant who took his duties seriously. The recruiting officer, feeling the chilly weather, noticed that the sergeant was not wearing his blouse. Upon inquiring he was informed that the sergeant, in line with recruiting duty, had loaned his blouse to a local merchant for a window display. "I'm glad that he (the sergeant) had an extra pair of trousers," the officer wrote. "Otherwise I would have probably found him home in bed!"

It was announced this week that Headquarters, U. S. Marine Corps, will move to the new Navy Department Annex at Arlington, Va., on 13 Oct. A formal order was issued this week by the Navy Department.

Army Equipment—Overseas garrisons of the U. S. Army have generally 100 per cent of all their equipment, General George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, told a Congressional committee recently. Some of the task forces are similarly equipped, he said, but "as regards the units not on task forces, which include the great bulk of the Army, they have a training allowance. They have 100 per cent of rifles and machine guns and 75-mm cannon, but they are short in the modern types of weapons." General Marshall's statement was made before a House Appropriations Committee sub-committee. He pointed out that priorities were changed "according to the situation."

"At the present time," said General Marshall, "the Philippine garrison stands No. 1 on priorities. Then we have certain task forces. You have read about an amphibian corps. It includes a Marine division, our 1st Division, and special troops that go with them, a total of about 35,000. There are two of these corps in training. We have certain other units which are on a 100 per cent basis as to priority, but they have not yet reached 100 per cent as to equipment."

Coast Artillery Corps—Graduation exercises for 168 students of the Coast Artillery Corps' Officers Candidate School, Ft. Monroe, Va., were held last Friday, 3 Oct. Maj. Gen. Joseph A. Green, Chief of the Coast Artillery Corps was the principal speaker. Of the 168 who completed the course, 160 were given commissions as second lieutenants in the Army of the United States and ordered to extended active duty, while eight were awarded certificates of capacity and will remain on duty as enlisted personnel. The 168 students were all members of an original group of 200 which began the course 12 weeks before. A second class of 200 students entered the school the next day, 4 Oct. Brig. Gen. F. S. Clark is commandant of the Coast Artillery School.

The first class of students to undergo training at the new Barrage Balloon Training School, Camp Davis, N. C., has completed the course and new classes have started. The graduates of the school are now being assigned as instructors and enlisted specialists in balloon squadrons. The students began the course on 28 July under instructors gathered from the Air Corps and Coast Artillery who were well versed in barrage balloon work. With the majority of the graduates being assigned to the school as instructors, it is planned that all Air Corps personnel now on the faculty staff will be eventually relieved. The course of training offered at the school, which is under the jurisdiction of Col. Robert Arthur, embraces various phases of gas service, weather service, inspectors duties, maneuver of balloons, rigging and repair of balloons, and similar subjects.

The new Barrage Balloon Board, recently organized at Camp Davis, N. C., will welcome constructive proposals from anyone whether or not a member of the service, pertaining to subject matter that may be properly studied by the board. Members of the board include: Col. Robert Arthur, CAC, commanding Barrage Balloon Training Center, Maj. John J. Johnson, CAC, Maj. Samuel T. Moore, AC, and Capt. Oswald H. Milmore, CAC.

According to present plans, all barrage balloon training activities at Camp Davis, N. C., will be transferred to Camp Tyson, Paris, Tenn., by the end of the calendar year. The site of this new barrage balloon center was selected some time ago and construction is proceeding satisfactorily.

Two new manuals dealing with barrage balloons are now under preparation. The first of the manuals, Coast Artillery Field Manual on Service of the Balloon, prescribing the service of low altitude balloons (balloons flying under 7,000 feet), is nearing completion and will be issued shortly in a tentative form. The second manual, on the tactical organization and employment of barrage balloon units is now being prepared in collaboration with the staff of the Barrage Balloon School. It will be entitled "Coast Artillery Field Manual on Organization and Tactics, Barrage Balloon."

Medium range radios for each battery of the 52nd Coast Artillery (Railway) will be distributed soon. Selection of a suitable generating plant to take care of power requirements for each battery is now being made.

Several new type "prime movers" for anti-aircraft guns will be tested shortly at Ft. Monroe, Va., among which are full-track trucks, half-track trucks, and a high-wheeled close-coupled truck. At the present time six-ton trucks are used for the movement of anti-aircraft guns. These trucks, it is stated, are six-wheel-drive vehicles. The vehicles under test are expected to provide better cross-country mobility in situations likely to be encountered in field operations.

The Quartermaster Corps is procuring an undisclosed number of radio controlled water-borne targets for use by Coast Artillery seacoast batteries. The new equipment is described as very fast and maneuverable. They should provide valuable training under conditions impossible to secure with the old towed targets without endangering crews of the tugs.

Five new Diesel locomotives will be purchased by Corps of Engineers and turned over to the Coast Artillery Corps for use of the railway artillery. Three of the new engines, according to present plans will be turned over to the 52nd Coast Artillery (Railway), one will be sent to the Coast Artillery Replacement Training Center, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., while the fifth will be stored until put into service.

Brig. Gen. Richard F. Cox has been assigned to command the Fourth Coast Artillery District, with headquarters at Ft. McPherson, Ga. General Cox is at present in command of the 38th Coast Artillery Brigade at Camp Stewart, Ga.

The War Department, in keeping with its program of pre-planning, has announced the award of an architectural-engineering contract for design, and at the option of the government, supervision of construction of a complete camp for an anti-aircraft firing center at Venice Beach, Fla. The center is to have a capacity of approximately 15,000 troops.

Brig. Gen. Robert H. Van Volkenburgh, USA, has been relieved from assignment and duty with the Fourth Army, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif., and has been assigned to command the 40th Anti-aircraft Brigade, Ft. Sheridan, Ill.

Coast and Geodetic Survey—Rear Adm. L. O. Colbert, Director of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, announces a new edition of the Aeronautical Planning Chart of the United States. This new edition shows the limits of the civil airways their designation by color and number, and the order of their precedence. Airways on which traffic is controlled are also distinguished from those on which traffic is not yet controlled. This information adds appreciably to the usefulness of the chart in planning long flights, and is of value throughout the flight for general use, as a control map.

As in the previous edition, the chart also includes a fairly complete drainage pattern, contours, and gradient tints, similar in treatment to the standard aeronautical charts of larger scale. A great many cities and some 400 principal airports are shown. Magnetic variation is indicated at intervals of 5 degrees.

In preparing for a flight of any considerable length, a straight line is first drawn on the Planning Chart, from starting point to destination. This line is then modified, if necessary, in order to avoid dangerously high mountains, large bodies of water, or other unfavorable surface conditions, and to take advantage of the civil airways and aids to navigation. The modified line representing the route is then transferred to the larger scale charts which are to be used in flight.

For actual navigation the Coast and Geodetic Survey provides three series of charts, covering the United States on various scales. These consist of 87 sectional charts, 17 regional charts and 6 radio direction-finding charts.

A first edition of the Planning Chart proved very popular, more than 10,000 copies having been distributed in the nine months since it was first issued. With the additional information now shown, an even greater demand is anticipated. More than 6,000 copies of the new edition have already been issued.

Provisional Parachute Group—Although the big Louisiana Army maneuvers are now past history, the feats and exploits of the men and units who participated are still a lively subject for discussion from both officers and men of the Army and from the press as well. There is probably no individual unit that has received as much attention from Army officers, civilians, and the press as have the parachute troops which participated. And there has been little discussion other than praise for Company A of the 502nd Parachute Battalion, which although organized only some eight weeks before, was used in the maneuvers as a veteran outfit.

An officer intimately connected with the organization and training work of the Provisional Parachute Group said that the landing made by parachutists in their simulated attack on the Red Army communications was one of the most perfect mass jumps he had ever witnessed. He added that the entire company of about 124 men were all eager to attack and showed the highest morale of any troops he saw while at the maneuvers.

The parachute attack, he said, was scheduled to start at 9:30 a.m. and at exactly 9:30 the first parachute trooper stepped from one of the 13 Army transport planes that roared overhead. Jumping from 1,200 feet, the first of the troops was on the ground within 11 seconds. By 10:00 they had formed into a fighting unit, destroyed a Red bridge, captured several Red trucks and cars and had disrupted the main highway over which Red Army supplies were moving. It was 11:55 before the first Red organization was sent into this area to fight the parachute troops.

Although the parachutists were theoretically captured or destroyed, he said that they were highly successful in creating confusion behind the lines. They "destroyed" all Red communications in about 200 miles of the area in which they had landed, and in a wooded section caused such havoc that Red army patrols chased one another through the bushes.

Among some of the lessons driven home by the use of parachute troops in the Louisiana exercise was that detailed photo-maps and heavier weapons for parachute troops are a necessity. When the parachute troops made their attack on the Red army forces, they were defeated after a tough scrap. But it is to be remembered that when the day before the parachute troops attacked, the skies were overcast and inclement weather threatened. The weather prohibited pilots from mapping the combat area. They did make some maps the next morning, but the troopers had little chance to study them. To accomplish their mission effectively, officers are agreed that they should have photo-maps and sand models of the terrain on which they are to operate.

So far as heavy weapons are concerned, a quick solution to this problem will be had in the addition of heavy weapons companies to the existing parachute battalions. A heavy weapons company, similar to a regular Infantry heavy weapons company, may be added to the 503rd or the 504th (the latter scheduled for activation early in October, a full month ahead of previous set date) battalions. This heavy weapons company will be for entirely experimental purposes, but after revision to suit the needs of parachute troops will be added to all battalions. Personnel for activation of the heavy weapons companies will be drawn from Infantry Replacement Training Centers. The weapons themselves can be dropped by parachute with little difficulty and with little revamping the battalions can easily incorporate this new company which will immeasurably increase its power and striking ability. The strength of a heavy weapons company is approximately 120 men. This new company will give Army parachute battalions five combatant companies in addition to the headquarters and headquarters company.

However Company A, of the 502nd Parachute Battalion, is not the only unit capable of drawing praise for work well done. At Ft. Belvoir last week, members of Company B, of the 502nd made their first mass jump during the demonstration staged there for Congressmen. Three large transport planes, accompanied by swarms of fighters and dive bombers, provided transportation for the troops and equipment. Although they were assigned to a difficult mission—that of holding a bridge head against heavy odds—they made a mass jump that was marred only to the extent of two troopers drifting into nearby trees. Members of Congress, many of whom had never saw a mass parachute jump, said emphatically that the performance by the troopers was one of the most thrilling spectacles they had ever witnessed.

One of the most amusing stories coming from the participation of parachute troops in the Louisiana maneuvers concerns that of a small force of parachute troops sent to seize vital records in the headquarters of the commanding general of the Red Army. This force of one officer and four men, upon landing, captured a Red Army truck, roared through defending troops at a cross road and finally reached Lt. Gen. Ben Lear's headquarters. By a ruse the parachute troopers finally gained access to the headquarters after "slugging" a Red guard. Within the headquarters they set about their mission and became separated. One of the men, said to be the officer, was discovered by military police who immediately gave chase. Running full speed down a corridor, the trooper made a turn, saw a fountain, and took a long drink while the military police raced on down the hall in search for him.

A new demolition kit that parachute troops will use has been developed by the Engineer Board. The new kit, said to be as light as an ordinary knapsack, contains a score of TNT blocks that are placed around the outside of a canvas block. Inside, in a second compartment, are safety fuzes, cap-crimping pliers, twine, a drill and pocket knife and a supply of matches in a waterproof container. A third small compartment, contrary to previous explosive-handling practices, contains blasting caps needed to detonate the TNT. Each cap is individually insulated from the others and the entire container is carefully padded with sponge rubber.

Armored Division—Sixteen members of the 1st Armored Division were cited by Maj. Gen. Bruce Magruder, commanding the "Old Ironsides" division, Ft. Knox, Ky., for their "outstanding achievements, exemplary leadership and soldiery qualities" displayed in a recent phase of the Louisiana maneuvers.

Officers and men cited include Maj. Peter C. Haines, Lt. Otto L. McBride, Lt. Louis D. Lippincott, Capt. Charles W. Miller, Capt. Leigh W. Hunt, Lt. P. C. Root, Capt. William A. Luther, 2nd Lt. Joe T. Maxwell, Sgt. Hayes S. Noble, Capt. L. V. Hightower, Sgt. Charles O. Goebel, Capt. Norman W. Parsons, 2nd Lt. Arthur R. Moore, 2nd Lt. Freeland A. Daubin, Jr., Sgt. James F. Carr, and Cpl. Dale J. Barkley.

The ten thousandth diploma from the Armored Force School was awarded on 30 Sept. to Sgt. Charles W. Brown, of the Armored Force Replacement Training Center. Maj. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, Chief of the Armored Force, made the presentation.

The school is furnishing nearly 500 graduates a week to the five armored divisions to maintain its quota of 22,000 enlisted men and 1,400 officers a year.

Chief Signal Officer—Since the retirement, 30 Sept., of Maj. Gen. Joseph O. Mauborgne, as Chief Signal Officer of the Army, there has been considerable speculation as to the failure of the President to nominate an officer to succeed to that post. When General Mauborgne left on terminal leave, many weeks ago, Brig. Gen. Dawson Olmstead, the next ranking officer of the Signal Corps, who was then commanding Ft. Monmouth, was ordered to Washington as Acting Chief Signal Officer, which post he has held ever since. General consensus of opinion was then, and still is, that General Olmstead is slated for the position. However, the failure of the President to send his nomination to the Senate has aroused endless discussion. On at least two occasions since General Mauborgne left, the President has sent other general officer nominations to the Senate, but he has not sent any for the Signal Corps. Furthermore, there is every evidence at the War Department that there is no intention of filling the vacancy within the near future. What the significance of this situation may be is a matter for speculation, inasmuch as the real reason is known only to the administration. There are some who believe that consideration is being given to the selection of someone from the radio industry to fill the post.

In the meantime, however, General Olmstead is carrying out the duties of Chief Signal Officer with vigor. He made an inspection this week of the New Philadelphia Signal Depot, Philadelphia, Pa., and the Signal Corps Installation at Ft. Monmouth, N. J. While in Philadelphia, General Olmstead spoke at a meeting of representatives of the Bell Telephone Company. After the inspection at Ft. Monmouth, General Olmstead went to New York to observe exercises of the First Interceptor Command.

Further decentralization of the Office of the Chief Signal Officer was effected last week when Col. Roger B. Colton, Director of the Materiel Branch, with the approval of Brig. Gen. Dawson Olmstead established five new individual sections. Among the new sections was a Scheduling Division under Lt. Col. Eugene W. Elder, which set up the requirements and production program; the Procurement Division under Lt. Col. A. A. Farmer; the Storage and Issue Division under Lt. Col. Ray C. Hildreth; the Maintenance Division under Lt. Col. John M. Heath; and the Legal Division under Lt. Col. Conrad E. Snow, which will handle the contracts and patents situations.

Army Air Forces—A change in regulation announced by the War Department now permits Army Air Corps aviation cadets to receive credit for prior flight training. Cadets, may, within the discretion of the Air Corps supervisor at the schools, be credited with flying time up to a maximum of 30 hours. Sixty hours of flight training is requisite for graduation. The change will enable the War Department to take advantage of the Civilian Pilot Training by allowing credits for previous flying experience and will lighten the burden on instructors and planes. The flying time allowance for previous experience will be based on the individual proficiency of the student as determined by the supervisor. Students who receive partial or maximum credit for flying proficiency will, however, complete the full required ground course of instruction consisting of 140 hours.

Under normal conditions, it's a tough, four-hour job to change engines on one of the BT-14 basic training planes used by the Air Corps, but a five-man crew from the 53rd School Squadron, Randolph Fld., Tex., working under adverse conditions, last week turned the trick in less than two hours. The incident occurred when Lt. John S. Olsson, of Randolph Fld., radioed that he had been forced down by motor failure. The engine crew, composed of Sgt. Albert Valdez, Jr., Cpl. Lewis E. Buswell, Pvt. James R. Smith, Pvt. Howard J. Maedgen, and Pvt. John O. Conoway, were sent to the plane which was forced down near Selma, Tex., and working in the field accomplished the change, gave the plane a 30-minute ground run and submitted it for final inspection in one hour and 59 minutes.

Maj. Gen. Frank P. Lahm, world pioneer in military aviation, last week was appointed commander of the Gulf Coast Air Corps Training Center, Randolph Fld., Tex., succeeding Maj. Gen. Gerald C. Brank, who now heads the Army's Newfoundland Base Command. General Lahm, who was nominated by President Roosevelt to be a major general on 15 Sept., was formerly Second Corps Area Air Officer.

Completing a flight of 26,000 miles to Africa and the Near East War Zone during which he carried Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, Chief of the Army Air Corps, to Cairo, Egypt, Lt. Col. Caleb V. Haynes, AC, arrived in Washington on 7 Oct. to report to Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Forces.

Colonel Haynes' trip was made in a four-engine Consolidated B-24 Bombardment airplane; it involved 26,000 miles of flying at an average speed of 237 miles an hour. On the westbound trip the big plane made what is believed to have been the first trans-Atlantic crossing between sun-rise and sunset. The flight, from Takoradi, on the African Gold Coast, to Belem do Para, Brazil, a distance of 3,400 miles, of which 2,400 was over water, was made in 13 hours 45 minutes, at an average speed of 248 miles an hour, with a slight tail wind.

As passengers on the return flight, Colonel Haynes had Col. Ray A. Dunn, AC; Col. James B. Newman, Jr., CB; Col. Harvey W. Burwell, AC; and Mr. Harry C. Short, Middletown Air Depot, Middletown, Pa.

General Brett is on a tour of the British war fronts to promote the development and procurement of all types of aircraft and aviation equipment now being supplied to nations defending themselves against aggression.

Interceptor exercises designed to test the air defenses of the vital population centers and industrial areas along the Eastern seaboard from Boston to Savannah started on 9 Oct. and will continue through 25 Oct. Lt. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, Commander of the Air Force Combat Command, announced this week.

General Emmons said these exercises will test the ability of many thousands of civilian observers to detect the invasion of hostile aircraft. Likewise, they will test the skill of the personnel of the First and Third Interceptor Commands in getting their planes into the air in time to intercept "invading" aircraft, theoretically shooting them down or driving them off before vital targets can be reached. Coordination of every known phase of communication has been effected in order that delay in "intercept" information reaching fighter units will be obviated. Success or failure of a mission may possibly hang on a difference of seconds in receiving messages.

Army bombers which make up the "invading force" are based at Westover Fld., Mass.; Windsor Locks, Conn.; Langley Fld., Va.; Savannah Air Base, Ga.; and Jacksonville, Fla. These craft will take to the air and in mimic aerial combat, attempt to "bomb" at will, targets in the vital areas anywhere from Boston to Savannah. Thousands of civilian observers of the Aircraft Warning Service will be on the alert at their assigned listening posts. It is the duty of these men and women to spot the flight of "enemy" aircraft and report immediately by telephone to their Filter Center, such vital facts as the number of planes in flight; the types of planes; altitude and direction of flight.

These data then go to the appropriate Information Center from whence are directed the operations of pursuit interceptor planes. It is the responsibility of these interceptor units to destroy or dissipate the attack before the "enemy" mission can be completed.

"Many helpful lessons undoubtedly will be learned from these exercises," General Emmons said. "It is hoped that as many persons as possible in the various States along the Atlantic Coast will become interested actively in this important phase of national defense. An efficient defense can be organized and maintained only by complete cooperation between Civilian Defense agencies, local volunteer observer organizations and the Interceptor Commands of the Air Force Combat Command."

Four hundred and seventy-six Randolph Field soldiers have been transferred to squadrons scheduled for assignment to the new training school fields at Waco, Texas, and Enid, Okla. Of the total, 237 will go to Enid and 239 to Waco, with 14 squadrons actually involved in the transfer. In addition, 13 officers were assigned to duty with the new units.

The recently-activated U. S. Army Air Corps outfits being sent to Enid include the 472nd, 473rd, 474th, and 475th School Squadrons and the 60th Air Base Group (Sp) which includes three separate units. The 468th, 469th, 470th, and 471st School Squadrons and the 59th Air Base Group (Sp) including three more separate units, will go to Waco. Departure orders are expected within 90 days. Strength of the school squadrons, to whose rosters more men will be added within a few weeks, is now from 35 to 40 men, including from six to 12 non-commissioned officers. The Air Base groups number about 75 men each. Each squadron, however, will be built up to 200 men after reporting to the new stations.

Quartermaster Corps—Brig. Gen. Joseph E. Barzynski, Assistant to the Quartermaster General, and Chief of the Motor Transport Division, will assume new duties today, 11 Oct., as commanding officer of the Chicago Quartermaster Depot. General Barzynski succeeds Col. Henry B. Barry, who remains in Chicago as his assistant.

Col. Herbert J. Lawes, QMC, formerly commandant of the Quartermaster school at Camp Holabird, Md., is acting chief of the Motor Transport Division. Colonel Lawes has been associated with the Motor Transport Division for many years, and has witnessed its extensive development from the earliest days of Army motor transportation.

Maj. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory, Quartermaster General, and a group of Army officers, this week visited Chicago, Ill., where they inspected key defense food plants. General Gregory was accompanied by Col. Russell Osmon, QMC; Lt. Col. A. Robert Ginsburgh, FA, Office of the Under Secretary of War; Lt. Col. Joseph Battley, Office of the Under Secretary of War; Capt. William Downs, MC; 1st Lt. Harry D. Williams, SC; 2nd Lt. John S. Hayes, QMC; 2nd Lt. Harry Moffett, QMC, and Mr. Paul R. Porter, special consultant for the Office of Production Management.

Representatives from the Army Industrial College, who also made the trip, include: Lt. Col. Frank H. Hastings, CAC; Maj. W. H. Hutchinson, QMC; Maj. Wilbur L. Plank, QMC; Capt. Walter M. Porosky, QMC; Capt. Richard T. Walton, QMC; Capt. Minat E. Scott, QMC; 2nd Lt. Harold M. Fredericksen, QMC; 2nd Lt. Ray W. Whitson, QMC; and 2nd Lt. William E. Merritt, QMC.

The following officers stationed in the Chicago District also accompanied General Gregory on the inspection tour: Col. Henry B. Barry, QMC; Lt. Col. Orville Jackson, QMC; Maj. G. R. Carpenter, GSC; Capt. W. W. Gildersleeve, M. I.; and 1st Lt. William G. Whyte, QMC.

The Quartermaster Corps, through the purchase of 1,981,784 blankets at an aggregate cost of $12,635,528.04, has completed the 1942 Army blanket procurement program. The blankets, which were manufactured by firms in all regions of the country, contain 100 per cent domestic wool and cost a maximum of $6.65 each.

As a result of arrangements made with Canada, Army trucks may now travel from Detroit, Mich., to Buffalo, N. Y., through Canadian territory, thus saving approximately 100 miles of driving and avoiding congested traffic in Great Lakes cities.

In a 24-hour period ending on the morning of 25 Sept., 24 igloos, storage warehouses for explosives, were poured at Umatilla Ordnance Depot, Hermiston, Ore., according to an announcement from the Office of the Constructing Quartermaster, Zone IX. The igloos are constructed in the shape of a half-barrel with a floor 26 feet 6 inches, by 60 feet 8 inches. The floor is built directly on the ground and the arched building placed over it. The 24 daily production figure has been claimed as a record.

Corps of Engineers—Brig. Gen. John J. Kingman, Brig. Gen. Clarence L. Sturdevant, Lt. Col. Homer Saint Gaudens, Maj. Robert H. Burrage, Capt. Frank Besson, Capt. Harry D. Temple, and 1st Lt. Alan B. Jacobs have been designated as observers to the First Army maneuvers in the Carolinas during October. The officers will leave for the maneuvers from the Office of the Chief of Engineers at various times during the month, thus assuring that work will not be held up because of officer absence from Washington. An additional group of Corps of Engineer officers will attend First Army maneuvers during November.

Highlight of exercises held at Ft. Belvoir, 2 Oct., was the work done by the engineer troops in demolition and bridge building. The exercises, held before an audience of Congressmen, ranking government officials, and newspapermen were acclaimed by many to be the finest demonstration ever put on by the War Department.

Speaking on the floor of the House, Rep. William T. Pfeiffer, of New York said this week that the Belvoir demonstration "gave us a new and vivid concept of the completeness and efficacy of the effort being made in our training camps to mold raw recruits into top-flight fighting men. If the work being done at Ft. Belvoir is typical of the activities of our other training camps," Rep. Pfeiffer continued, "it may be confidently asserted that it will not be many months before our new Army will be a real Army without peer."

Lt. Col. Leonard B. Gallagher, CE, District Engineer, Boston, Mass., has been assigned additional duties as Acting District Engineer, Providence, R. I. He will assume duties of the late Lt. Col. Harley Latson, CE.

Capt. Bernard C. Hibler, CE, has been relieved of his duty in the Personnel Section, Office, Chief of Engineers, and has been assigned to duty as assistant to Brig. Gen. Clarence L. Sturdevant, CE, Assistant Chief of Engineers.

Employing every opportunity to utilize highly specialized office machines in speeding up the handling of military personnel records, the Corps of Engineers have adopted tabulating machines, which aid in personnel selection.

Four basic machines are employed, which include a punching machine, an interpreting machine, a sorting machine, and an alphabetic tabulator. These are supplemented by a collating machine, a reproducing machine, and a versatile multiplying punch.

In order to facilitate organization and administration of the various Affiliated Engineer Units (Railway) the Chief of Engineers has been authorized to designate as offices of record the office of the District Engineer most conveniently located, appoint unit instructors, and forward the personal and classification records of Reserve officers concerned to the offices of record designated by him.

Corps Area Commanders are enjoined to allocate and assign Engineer Railway units to the Military Area in which is located the office of record for the unit as designated by the Chief of Engineers.

Field Artillery—Maj. Gen. R. M. Danford, Chief of Field Artillery, returned to Washington this week from the Field Artillery School, Ft. Sill, Okla.

TM-6-605 entitled "Field Artillery Individual and Unit Training Standards" is now in the hands of the printer and should be published in about a month.

There has been a great need for this manual since the expansion of the Field Artillery. It gives new inexperienced commanders a standard of training to be reached in their units and training aids in obtaining these standards. There are five sections in the manual. Section I is a general section; section II covers in detail the training aids for the field artillery soldier including all FMs, TMs, ARs, etc., of which he should have a thorough knowledge; section III gives the training aids for specialists and non-commissioned officers; section IV gives the training limits and standards for the field artillery battery and battalion; section V is an appendix containing a firing program which consists of a series of tests for the battery, battalion, and higher units. This appendix may be used as a guide for commanding officers in preparing training directives and programs.

Chaplains—Lt. Col. John O. Lindquist, Second Corps Area Chaplain, speaking Sunday, 5 Oct., at initiatory ceremonies for the first of twelve chapels completed at Ft. Dix, N. J., told the audience that, "These chapels are the most economical expenditure the War Department has made." He explained that at the end of the emergency, the chapels could be easily removed and sold to communities which need places of worship.

Col. C. M. Dowell, Commanding Officer of Ft. Dix, accepted the chapel from Lt. Col. Frederick H. Richardson, Post Constructing Quartermaster. Mrs. Francis H. O'Brien, wife of Lt. Col. Theodore O'Brien, Acting Post Surgeon, sang at the ceremonies. Maj. Harry J. Thourot, president of the 78th Division Veteran Association, which has adopted the chapel to be known not only as the Post Chapel, but also as the 78th Division Memorial Chapel, was also present.

An announcement from the Office of the Chief of Chaplains stated this week that as of 30 Sept., there were 1,527 chaplains on duty.

Chaplain Glenn J. Witherspoon, Office of the Chief of Chaplains, has been assigned to duty as observer of the First Army maneuvers in the Carolinas.

Chaplain H. A. Robinson, 77th Coast Artillery Regiment, Ft. Bragg, N. C., was the guest speaker at the Annual Convention of the Veterans' Association of South Carolina, held in Georgetown, S. C., on 28 Sept.

HOT FOODS A-PLENTY for SERVICE MEN

AerVoiD all-metal, vacuum insulated food, soup and coffee carriers for Army and Navy long-distance hot FAMILIES of the Cabinet officers heading the Services are gradually returning to Washington after summer migrations. The Secretary of War and Mrs. Stimson are again at Woodley their lovely suburban estate, though they are still no further from their Long Island place than a two-hour plane trip.

The Secretary of the Navy has been joined at Wardman Park by Mrs. Knox, who has spent the summer at their country place at Manchester, Mass., where her chief interest is a beautiful garden. Mrs. Forrestal, wife of the Under Secretary of the Navy, also joined her husband this past week at their home in Woodlawn Drive after a summer spent largely at their place on the Hudson.

Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, popular wife of the Under Secretary of War, also returned this past week, and after getting their gracious old house in Georgetown and three spirited youngsters equipped for the winter, has taken up her usual program of philanthropic and social activities. She is to be one of the ladies in the receiving line at the Military Ball 15 Oct., at the Mayflower for the benefit of the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, and she is also engaged in plans for another benefit for that club to be held later. The night of the ball she will be a dinner guest of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William D. Connor who are to entertain at their home in Tracy Place.

Mrs. George T. Pettengill, wife of the Commandant of the Navy Yard, has taken over the chairmanship of the Box committee for the Military Ball.

Maj. Gen. William D. Connor was the first to purchase a box. Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, chairman of the Floor Committee, with his two aides, Col. Horace B. Smith and Major John Caswell, are working out plans for a cotillion that promises to be a high light of the night's gayeties.

Mrs. W. E. Pattison French, widow of Major French, who accompanied Mrs. Ross T. McIntire, wife of Rear Admiral McIntire, Surgeon General of the Navy, to Honolulu for the summer, has returned to Washington and taken an apartment at 2101 Sixteenth Street, having rented her home in Georgetown to Mr. and Mrs. Rex Benson of the British Embassy.

After landing in San Francisco Mrs. French spent some time there and was extensively entertained. Among her hosts was Gen. Frederick Boschen who left Washington when he retired and with his daughter, Betty, has a most delightful home at 1 Ventura Ave., Forrest Hills, a suburb of San Francisco. Miss Betty Boschen will come to Washington in March to visit Mrs. French—good news to her hosts of friends in the Capital.

Among other old friends met in San Francisco were Col. and Mrs. Franklin Babcock who entertained for Mrs. French at the St. Francis Yacht Club.

FT. SAM HOUSTON, TEX.

6 October 1941

In spite of our spring rains and summer suns, we do know by looking at the calendar of social events that the fall season is at hand. The Army-Civilian Club will hold its first meeting next Monday, at the St. Anthony Hotel, with the civilian president, Mrs. Pleas J. McNeel presiding.

Col. and Mrs. Sterling Price Adams were hosts at a delightful dinner-dance last Sunday evening, at the Ft. Sam Houston Officers' Club. They had two tables, one for the honored guest, Miss Edith Cochran, and her large bridal-party, which was so prettily decorated, with white chrysanthemums and a bride doll in the center and hurricane lamps with frosted shades at either end of the table. Col. and Mrs. Adams with the parents of the bride and a few special friends, were seated at the second, and near-by table.

Lt. Gen. and Mrs. Walter Krueger have her son and daughter, of Ft. Ord, Calif., making them a visit until December, while Captain Smith is at the school at Ft. Leavenworth, Kans.

The many friends of Maj. Gen. Frank P. Lahm are happy that he is to wind up his active career with command of the Gulf Coast Air Corps Training Center, at Randolph Field, which was planned under his supervision, about twelve years ago.

The Society of Daughters of The United States Army held their luncheon and election of officers, at noon, Saturday, 4 Oct. at the Club, with a large attendance. Mrs. John R. Boatwright, wife of Lt. Col. Boatwright, at a bridge-luncheon on the Crazy Roof, on 25 Sept., honored three brides-elect: her daughter, Nancy, who will marry Lt. H. R. Bishop on 11 Oct., Miss Patty Williams, whose marriage to Lt. P. H. Schneider took place on 3 Oct., and Miss Ann Bradford, who became the bride of Lt. R. N. Denniston on 4 Oct. Red roses were used for decorations. Guests found their places by cards attached to hand-embroidered handkerchiefs, which served as favors.

Dainty pink rosebuds decked the tables at a smart "Brunch" given in honor of Miss Nancy Boatwright, bride-elect of Lt. H. R. Bishop, by Mrs. Carl D. Norman, wife of Capt. Norman and Mrs. Charles M. Dewey, wife of Captain Dewey, at the former's home in Mineral Wells on the morning of 28 Sept. Hand-painted cards in pastel designs marked places for the guests. The War Situation

The world is now tensely awaiting the outcome of Hitler's drive toward Moscow, the capital of the Russian Soviet Republic. At the time of the Munich agreements (1938), this Republic comprised a territory of 8,095,728 square miles with a population of 165,847,100. Germany then had an area of 181,639 square miles with a population of 66,030,491 and the British Empire, an area of 13,290,634 square miles with a population of 486,726,503. However, the United Kingdom comprised an area of only 89,041 square miles with a population of 44,937,444.

To Hitler's rear lies a dominated Europe whose subjection began in March, 1936, when Nazi troops marched into the Rhineland. Except for the resources of Europe, the German offensive which is deep in Russia would not be possible. The following tabulation of European countries, giving the nature of their governments, their areas and populations, is believed to be of particular interest at this time in view of the unrest in the conquered countries and the ultimate outcome of the fighting now in progress in Russia.

Yugo-Slavia	Kingdom	96,296	14,296,431
		1,682,750	268,114,109

With an initial stake of a disarmed and poverty stricken country of 181,639 square miles, inhabited by 66,030,491, Hitler has step by step made his will the law for all practicable purposes throughout Europe which according to the figures above consisted in 1938 of 1,682,750 square miles with a population of 268,114,109.

How Hitler has made the conquered countries serve the economic necessities of the Nazi armies and of the civil population of Germany is indicated by his action in Denmark and Holland. The occupation of Denmark was followed within a few weeks by the raising of the weekly butter ration in Germany, and by the doubling of the egg ration. Within a week of the occupation of Holland 17,000,000 pounds of Dutch butter—nearly 90 per cent of the country's stocks had been transferred to Germany.

Just what ultimate success will result from such methodical requisitioning of stocks of foodstuffs and other supplies is open to much speculation. The recent outbreaks in the conquered countries, would indicate that the peoples of those countries are becoming desperate. On the other hand Hitler's ability to project his war machine across Europe to within less than 150 miles of Moscow proves beyond a doubt that his economic organization of Europe is functioning efficiently at the present time.

The utilization of available transport facilities from all the corners of Europe and the procurement of the necessary fuel for the motive machinery are fundamental to efficiency of her organization. How much and how each country has contributed to its success to date are not known. The present venture into Russia must be cutting rapidly into the Nazi Reserves but there are no definite data on this point.

The "scorched earth" policy of Russia may eventually react against the mobility of the Nazis' war machine and encourage the conquered peoples to resist more aggressively but the present tempo of the Nazi offensive indicates that the long lines of communications are well supplied and guarded throughout Europe's 1,682,750 square miles with its 268,114,109 people.

New Quartermaster Officers

Philadelphia, Pa.—One of the last official acts of the Quartermaster School at historic Schuylkill Arsenal in Philadelphia was the setting of a precedent destined to affect the future course of the Corps—the granting of 130 commissions to enlisted candidates. The first class of its type in the Quartermaster Corps, the men were given commissions in the Army of the United States after a three months course of study at the School.

Introduced by Col. H. L. Whittaker, Commandant of the School, Brig. Gen. Henry D. F. Munnikhuyse spoke briefly on the problems facing the new officers.

"You have probably noted that people are divided into those who can bear burdens and those who cannot," General Munnikhuyse said. "You now belong to the class who are supposed to be burden bearers. Do not let down your juniors. You can often fool the commanding officer, but never those rear rank privates."

"And never forget the golden rule," General Munnikhuyse continued. "If you must apply discipline, as you will have to do in some cases, apply it impartially, without anger, and with some sorrow that the other man's actions are such as to make it necessary."

Following the swearing in by Capt. George Huber, post Adjutant, and the benediction by Chaplain Keller, the new officers entertained the faculty and their own families at a luncheon.

Service Sports

West Point, N. Y.—Flashing a speedy offense and a stout defense, the Army opened its 1941 football season Saturday with an impressive 19-to-6 victory over The Citadel, of Charleston, S. C. The Southerners were outplayed all the way but fought hard. The game was played at West Point.

Each team scored on passes in the first period, but both missed the try for point. Kelleher scored for the Army on the fifth play of the game, taking a pass from Mazur on the Citadel 20 and running across the pay stripes untouched. The Citadel capitalized on a pass and scored.

A poor kick by The Citadel gave Army the ball on its own 29 midway in the second quarter. After a series of short gains, Maupin of Army finally shook loose and ran 40 yards for a touchdown. Roberts placekicked the extra point, making the score 13-6, favor of Army.

After four minutes of the third period, a pass from Maupin to Mazur, put the ball on The Citadel 24 yard line. On the next play, Mazur in a reverse went over for the third touchdown for the Army eleven.

Late in the final period, Army got the ball down to the Citadel five but a touchdown pass from Stephens to Johnson was intercepted by Salvato of Citadel and the game ended. Final score: Army, 19; The Citadel, 6.

Annapolis, Md.—A powerful Navy football eleven, held in check and outplayed by a strong West Virginia University combine during all but the closing minutes of the entire first half, rolled up an impressive 40-0 win after demoralizing the WVU squad by scoring on a blocked kick. The game played in Thompson Stadium, Annapolis, Md., was witnessed by 20,126 persons.

All during the first period the tight West Virginia defense kept the Navy attack bottled up while the Mountaineers twice marched short distances into Middle territory.

Navy's only score in the first half came in the second period on a brilliantly executed lateral following the recovery of a blocked kick. Dick Opp, captain of the Navy second varsity, blocked the kick that paved the way for the Navy's first tally. From then until the end of the second half, both teams were held in check.

Soon after the second half opened, Bill Busk, Navy triple threat, shot a pass to Sammy Bothe, who ran 33 yards to the West Virginia 22. Werner gained 5 yards in three plays. Then Busk shot a pass to Bob Zoeller over the goal line.

From there, the West Virginia defense crumbled and Navy scored almost at will. Busk scored the third touchdown of the game by punching through right tackle. The fourth Navy touchdown came when Cameron broke away for a 52-yard run before being stopped on the Mountaineer 20. A pass from Clark to Phil Gutting to the end zone scored again for Navy.

With the West Virginia defense routed, Navy shoved two more touchdowns over in the fourth period. The final score: Navy, 40; West Virginia, 0.

Moffett Field, Calif.—The Moffett Field Flyers, strong service football team, today meet the University of California Ramblers, while the "B" squad will meet the University of Santa Clara Frosh tomorrow, 12 Oct. The Flyers opened their season with a 28-0 victory over the Chico State College eleven.

Camp Callan, Calif.—Cpl. Steve Vargas, star Notre Dame halfback in 1940, and at present a cadre member of Battery A-57, is playing together with 12 other Camp Callan men on a professional football team, which opens its season against the Hollywood Bears on 26 Oct.

St. Slocum, N. Y.—With the football season scarcely under way, Coach Fred Jackson this week issued a call for all basketball candidates to report on 15 Oct. for the first practice session. A schedule is now being compiled for the season.

Ft. Jay, N. Y.—Mickey Harris, left-handed pitching star of the Boston Red Sox was recently given his physical examination here.

Ft. Hancock, N. J.—The football season opened here officially on 20 Sept. as the 52nd (Ry) Coast Artillery team defeated the 245th, 8-0.

Ft. Niagara—Last Rose of Summer Note: Defeating Camp Upton, N. Y., 8-7, the Ft. Niagara nine won the baseball championship of the Second Corps Area on 1 Oct. at Hyde Park Stadium, Niagara Falls. The Niagara team will soon meet Marr Bay, a team representing the harbor defenses around Boston and the titleholder of the First Corps Area. This game will decide the Army baseball champions of the Northeastern United States.

Ft. Bragg, N. C.—The baseball team from the Reception Center here, recently crowned champions of the largest artillery post, played an All-Star professional team at Durham, N. C. last week. Major leaguers who opposed the Ft. Bragg nine included Buck Newsom, Chubby Dean, Bill Baker, Crash Davis, and Boyd Sperry. Receipts of the game were turned over to the British Fire-Fighters for the purchase of equipment.

Notes from the Posts

Ft. Dix, N. J.—Maj. E. D. Brown, commandant of the Bakers and Cooks School here, revealed that seven teams of three Army cooks each busied themselves this week preparing cakes for a contest held at the Civilian and National Defense Exposition at Grand Central Palace, N. Y. Each of the seven cakes was afforded a military escort to New York.

Camp Davis, N. C.—Workmen are rushing to completion the service club and guest house for colored troops here, with the announced expectation that the buildings will be ready for occupancy by 1 Nov.

Ft. Bragg, N. C.—To Lts. J. T. Aubrey, Jr., and S. W. Pearson, Jr., went the honor of escorting Dinah Shore, singing star of Eddie Cantor's radio show, when she appeared in a musical revue here last week.

Camp Davis, N. C.—A furlough to Washington, D. C., with all expenses paid, will be awarded to the soldier here who can write or speak most forcefully on subjects relating to the Army. The winner will meet many officials in Washington according to announced plans.

Ft. Hamilton, N. Y.—Siberian, Eskimo, and Malamute Dogs, famous members of Admiral Byrd's Little American expedition, were recent guests here, awaiting transportation to a Northern destination for future training.

Ft. Tilden, N. Y.—Fifty men stationed here were recent guests at the Gay Blades Club, N. Y., where they had the pleasure of dancing with John Power's models to name bands, Xavier Cugat, Eddie Duchin, and Glenn Miller.

Ft. Wadsworth, N. Y.—"The Family Upstairs," a comedy by Harry Delf was recently presented at the Post Theatre here by the Stage Club, Cleveland, Ohio.

Ft. Niagara, N. Porter, stationed here, when he was recently made a first lieutenant and assigned to duty at Maxwell Field, Ala.—a distance of seven miles. So it was, that Lieutenant Porter, who in 19 years of Army life has travelled 35,000 miles, forfeited the 56 cents he would have received for travel allowance to his new post.

Ft. Stevens, Oreg.—Col. E. M. George, Zone Constructing Quartermaster, announced in San Francisco this week, that practically all construction will be finished here within a few days, including a regimental chapel, a warehouse, a water distribution system, and an officers' mess building. One remaining project, a nurses' quarters and mess, will be completed in November.

Island Maneuvers Realistic

"Maj. Gen. James L. Collins, Commanding General of the Puerto Rican Department, has alerted the troops in Puerto Rico." This terse statement released in a maneuver communique on 25 Sept., announced the opening of island-wide maneuvers in Puerto Rico, which ended yesterday, 10 Oct. Daily communiqués, realistic in every detail, were released to the press by maneuver authorities. Reporters had been advised previously that these communiqués, although appearing to be realistic, would not contain information of actual events, but would instead only record maneuver activity.

It was assumed that an enemy fleet was attacking Puerto Rico. To repel this invasion, all military forces on the island, together with Home Guards, trained for action, were called out to man vital positions in the island's defense chain; to work in Filter Centers; to fly out to sea in search of invading vessels; to do all that would destroy the invading forces.

To Sponsor Destroyer

Mrs. Christopher Robinson, Rockliff, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, was designated by the Secretary of the Navy this week as sponsor for the USS Gherard, destroyer named in honor of her grandfather, the late Rear Adm. Bancroft Gherard, USN.

FINANCE

Financial Digest

The effect on Business of the orders emanating from Washington is revealed by a report made by the Commerce Department. The latest orders to supplement those which have been restrictive, came this week from the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board and the OPM. The former prescribed that no new construction projects using scarce materials may be started during the Emergency unless necessary for National Defense, or essential to the health and safety of the people. The OPM placed iron and scrap under full priority, and will enable that Agency to take over any excess metal in any plant, and assign it to mills insufficiently supplied. The Federal Reserve Board also is expected to place additional curbs upon installment buying. Those in effect have caused a drastic drop in the volume of sales of a number of commodities and articles, new automobile sales dropping 30 per cent or more, radio 40 per cent, vacuum cleaners, refrigerators and other electrical appliances from 20 to 25 per cent. A few larger stores whose credit restrictions have been as tight as those of the Federal Reserve Board, report no drop in sales.

The Commerce Department report states that evidence that business gains are becoming increasingly limited began to accumulate in August. In the main such evidence centered on industrial productive activity, which increased only slightly during August over the July volume, heavier military output being offset to some extent by a decline in the automobile industry. Announcement of curtailment schedules in consumer durable lines clearly revealed that raw-material supplies—particularly the metals—can no longer support a rate of advance in aggregate output comparable to that of the first year of defense.

Despite raw-material problems, almost all business continued to be exceptionally active. Construction and the installation of new industrial equipment have been maintained at a very high level. Sustained by record building of plants and the largest backlog of residential awards since 1925, prospects point to a much smaller autumn let-down in building than in past years.

Retail purchasing has been extraordinarily heavy for this time of year. After an unusually small July decline, August sales rose much more than has been usual for the season. Some recent purchasing has represented forward buying by consumers. However, evidence is offered in support of the contention that sales through the first half of the year were in the aggregate in line with what should be expected, given the level of income now prevailing.

In the transport field the railways prepared for the autumn peak as August carloadings hovered around 900,000 weekly. Miscellaneous freight, dominated by industrial shipments, rose to the June level. Coal haulings were the heaviest of the year, but grain shipments were down slightly from July level. Shipment of iron ore by boat from the upper Lake ports was the largest on record.

On the price front, the advance continued at a fast pace. Though prices of farm products, which led the early movement upward, have leveled off somewhat, commodities other than the metals—particularly foods and building materials during August—are now being marked up to an increased extent.

The beginning of the third year of the second worldwide conflict finds the American economy in the midst of a vast effort to organize its resources for producing the materials of war. Through August, appropriations and contract authorizations for military purposes, including the first installment of lease-lend aid to Great Britain, totalled 56.4 billion dollars. Of this amount, all except 10 or 12 billion dollars has been specifically allocated in contracts or commitments.

Although many units in the huge network of new arms and raw-material plants rising over the Nation are not yet near completion, the proportion of total output channeled to the stream of war material has grown steadily. In July and August, defense expenditures resumed their rapid upward movement, after a much slower advance during the second quarter. August payments approximated 1.2 billion dollars, with the flow of finished armaments expanding significantly.

At the August rate defense expenditures were the equivalent of more than 15 percent of the national income. This may well be contrasted with the 1.5 percent of income utilized for defense purposes in the decade preceding the war. However, the present proportion of the income absorbed by defense needs is much lower than that which may confidently be expected. A monthly defense expenditure of 3 billion dollars has been suggested as likely by the Director General of the Office of Production Management. While the national product itself will rise further under the impetus of such an expenditure, it is probable that close to one-third of our total productive effort will be devoted to the needs of war.

Transfer Army Construction

Postponing further hearings on the proposed transfer of Army construction from the Quartermaster Corps to the Corps of Engineers, which were originally set for 7 Oct., the House Military Affairs Committee met on 9 Oct., and after a closed session, voted to report the legislation favorably. The committee amended the text of the House measure, H. R. 5360, to conform with the text of the Senate bill S. 1884.

Text of the measure as reported by both Senate and House Military Committees follows:

Be it enacted, etc.,

That the Chief of Engineers, under the authority of the Secretary of War, is hereby charged, in addition to other duties imposed upon him by law, with the direction of all work pertaining to the construction, maintenance, and repair of buildings, structures, and utilities for the Army; with the acquisition of all real estate and the issuance of licenses in connection with Government reservations; and with the operation of water, gas, electric, and sewer utilities: Provided, That utilities pertaining exclusively to any branch of the Army may be operated by such branch.

Sec. 2. All funds, property, and records pertaining to the activities described in section 1, and all civilian personnel engaged solely thereon, shall be transferred to the jurisdiction of the Chief of Engineers.

Sec. 3. All laws and parts of laws which are inconsistent herewith or in conflict with the provisions hereof are hereby repealed.

The War Department, in a recent circular letter, states all military personnel, except personnel assigned to duty in Bermuda, must obtain a visa before leaving the United States. Personnel assigned to duty in Bermuda are admitted upon presentation of their identification cards and military orders.

Merchant Marine

Contracts for six C-3 cargo ships to cost $3,160,000 each, and for six small harbor tugs to cost $290,000 each have been signed by the Maritime Commission. The six C-3 ships, 492 feet in length, will be delivered during 1943, and will be turbine-propelled. They will have a cruising radius of 14,320 miles, thus enabling long voyages without refueling.

The newly created procurement section of the Maritime Commission's Construction Division, will purchase all materials for the construction of emergency cargo vessels, it was announced this week. C. E. Welsh, Jr., chief of the procurement section, will now handle much of the material purchases formerly made by individual shipyards.

At the same time, it was announced that the Commission's Division of Purchase and Supply will continue to handle procurement of other than ship construction materials.

Ship Ways Expand

Speaking at the 30th Annual Safety Congress and Exposition, National Safety Council, meeting in Chicago, Ill., this week, Mr. J. F. McInnis, principal naval architect, Maritime Commission, said that "since the beginning of the Commission's building program in the fall of 1937, our shipbuilding facilities have grown from 10 yards with 46 building ways, . . . to 32 yards with 234 ways."

Mr. McInnis, in his opening remarks, outlined the development of safety techniques and methods in the construction and operation of ocean-going vessels. He pointed out specific changes that have been developed in recent years—all with an eye towards better safety records at sea. These changes have been made in equipment, in materials, in weights of cargoes, and strength of booms, among many others. He said, "The use of fire-resistance materials in ship construction has revolutionized interior design in ships."

After outlining new safety methods being adopted, Mr. McInnis turned to the construction program now being carried out by the commission. "Our initial long range building program was one ship per week," he said. "By December of this year," he continued, "we will be launching one ship per day, and by July, 1942, we plan the completion of two ships a day."

He pointed out that this expanded construction program will cost more than $3,000,000,000, and will require the efforts of nearly a million skilled workers.

Mr. F. M. Darr, Chief of Traffic Division of Emergency Shipping, Maritime Commission, spoke this week before the National Foreign Trade Convention, New York, N. Y., on "Government Regulation of Shipping During the Emergency."

He explained to his audience the methods which the government is employing to make the best use of available shipping, and at the same time greatly increase present shipping facilities. He pointed out that ships were being allocated as economically as possible, and that the Maritime construction program had been expanded many times to meet increasing needs.

Observers "Below Standard"

In a training directive issued this week, Lt. Gen. Ben Lear, commanding the Second Army, stated:

"1. The maneuvers just terminated proved emphatically that the training of observers, both air and ground, is definitely below standard. Exaggerated, incomplete and incorrect reports and frequently conclusions instead of FACTS were entirely too common."

"2. To correct this condition, each combat battalion or similar separate unit will immediately train and maintain a group of at least 10 qualified observers. Section V, FM 30-10 will be used as a guide and the development of the senses of perception and training in factual reporting will be stressed."

"3. Air observation squadrons will stress also those matters contained in FM 1-20 (para. 22, 23, and Sections I-III, VI and VIII) in addition to those covered in FM 30-10, Section V."

"4. All units will insure that observers know and can identify all vehicles, airplanes and equipment issued and to be issued to the Army of the United States. They must be able to distinguish between tanks, trucks, scout cars, weapon carriers, pontoon equipment and artillery. They must know the various types of artillery, light tanks, medium tanks and GHQ tanks. Actual vehicles and equipment, and pictures from all angles must be utilized to insure that observers have this knowledge."

Shows for Soldiers and Sailors

The talent organizations of America as well as the three great entertainment industries of the country this week pledged their complete support to the plan of the Army and the Navy for a regular circuit of shows to furnish relaxation to the 2,000,000 soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Armed forces of the country.

This action took place at a conference on the theatrical program for the Army and Navy held under the chairmanship of Brig. Gen. Frederick H. Osborn, Chief of the Morale Branch of the Army, in the Munitions Building, Washington, D. C. The Navy was represented by Comdr. John Reynolds and Lt. Comdr. Arthur T. Noren.

Others present included Col. William H. Draper, Jr., Assistant Chief of the Army Morale Branch; Lt. Col. M. M. Montgomery; Maj. James Carroll, Maj. Marvin Young all of the Morale Branch; Lt. Col. W. Mason Wright, Jr., of the Army Bureau of Public Relations; Maj. F. A. Collins, of the General Staff as well as Samuel E. M. Crocker, Executive Director of the Joint Army and Navy Committee on Welfare and Recreation, and Francis Keppel, Secretary, Joint Army and Navy Committee on Welfare and Recreation.

Detailed in I. G. D.

Lt. Col. Robert L. Wright, Inf., has been ordered detailed in the Inspector General's Department, effective 13 Oct. 1941. He is relieved from his present assignment and duty at Ft. Barrancas, Fla., and will proceed to New Orleans, La., and sail, about 15 Oct., for the Panama Canal Department.

National Defense Appropriations

The House of Representatives this week undertook consideration of additional national defense appropriations, covering for the most part a second lend-lease appropriation totalling $5,985,000,000.

The remainder of the $6,150,416,229.39 bill covers various supplementary appropriations, including $120,996,000 for naval ordnance and ordnance stores, and $25,008,585 for the Coast Guard.

Amount of the lend-lease appropriation recommended by the Appropriations Committee was not changed from the budget estimates. The committee, however, reduced the $227,470,774.39 recommended for other purposes by $53,054,545, to reach the $174,416,229.39 appropriation recommended.

Lend-Lease

The War Department will be charged with production and distribution of $2,255,575,667 of the lend-lease funds. The Navy will handle $1,498,129,333, the Department of Agriculture $1,000,000,000, the Maritime Commission $374,225,000, and other agencies, smaller amounts.

Other Appropriations

Of the $174,416,229.39 for other purposes, $7,032,734.39 is for non-defense objects. The remainder is divided as follows:

National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, aeronautical research, $1,424,000. In addition the limitation of cost of Ames Aeronautical Laboratory, Moffett Field, Calif., is increased from $10,000,000 to $16,207,000 to permit construction of another wind tunnel. Scientific research and development, Office of Emergency Management, $10,000,000. Department of Agriculture, $1,041,500. Department of Commerce, Bureau of Standards, $98,410.

Department of the Interior, power projects and strategic material searches, $8,215,000.

Navy Department, ordnance, $120,996,000, including $118,216,000 for guns and ammunition for vessels and airplanes, and $2,780,000 for experiments and tests of ordnance materials, including tests of new substitute materials.

Coast Guard (described elsewhere in this issue), $25,008,585.

The committee again removed a budget request for $1,125,000 for a Navy Plant Protection Force.

Hearing Highlights

Developments in the National Defense program as revealed in testimony of various officials before the House Appropriations Committee included the following:

"This budget . . . does not and is not intended to meet all the justifiable needs of the country to be aided. It is only intended to cover commitments that should be made prior to March 1942, when additional funds should be provided. . . . Our obvious objective is the ultimate defeat of the Axis Powers. This cannot be done without munitions superiority."—Maj. Gen. J. H. Burns, USA, executive officer, Lend-Lease Agency.

"Many have been disappointed at the amount of lend-lease help which has been made available . . . because lend-lease aid is thought to be the total help which the British have received from the United States. Such is not the fact. Since the beginning of the war, over $4,000,000,000 of exports have been shipped to the British Empire and to Egypt. These goods were bought and paid for; they cost us nothing."—Philip Young, Division of Defense Aid Reports.

The Navy will undertake construction for the British of a number of convoy escort vessels to cost $6,250,000 a piece; total cost $325,000,000.—Chief of Naval Operations Stark and Chief of Bureau of Ships Robinson.

Ten million dollars will be spent to train British pilots in this country; $1,125,000 to care for personnel "coming over here to man the carriers which are being converted to British use."—Capt. D. C. Ramsey, USN.

"We have actually been conducting repairs on 34 (British) ships and 28 small craft. . . . They occupy about one-third of our navy yards' repair facilities."—Admiral Robinson. We will build a million-dollar, 10,000-ton concrete oil barge, holding about 65,000 barrels.—Chief of Yards and Docks Moreell.

"Except for tanks, I can think, offhand, of practically nothing that we have taken away from our troops, except the heavy bombers we allocated about a year ago last November, 20 flying fortresses and 36 of the B24 heavy bombers. . . . We have a fifth armored or panzer division that is to be created on the first of October, starting with 5,000 men. We are creating a sixth division in March, and it will initially get 20 per cent of its tank equipment and then 50 per cent by April."—Chief of Staff Marshall. (The 5th Armored Division has been created since General Marshall testified.)

"I have been over there every other year since 1921, and basing this on the estimate of her facilities in my own mind, I do not think she can make more than around 2,000 planes per month. Of course, it depends entirely on the size of the plane; if you are referring to bombers, that is one thing; or to trainers, that is another."—Director General Knudsen, asked about German plane production.

T. Hicks Honored

The tenth birthday of T. Hicks on Wednesday, 1 Oct., was the occasion of a party at the home of Col. and Mrs. Thomas H. Lowe, AGD, USA, at their Washington, D. C. home.

Present to honor T. Hicks were a dozen of Colonel and Mrs. Lowe's officer and civilian friends and their wives, accompanied by their young charges.

Rain prevented taking of movies of the party, the festivities being moved to the basement of the Lowe home.

The menu was somewhat on the odd side—cocktails of beef soup and a birthday cake of hamburger feed with white of egg, decorated with ten candles.

T. Hicks, it may be mentioned, is the thoroughbred Airdale of the Lowes. His canine friends got along with a minimum of friction, it was reported.

Club Elects Officers

Members of the West Point-Annapolis Club, Rochester, N. Y., elected Lt. Col. Roy L. Bowlin, executive officer of Rochester Ordnance District, as president at a recent meeting.

Other officers elected by the organization, whose membership is composed of graduates of the two Service academies, are George Lawrence, Bausch and Lomb Optical Co., vice-president; and Capt. Robert L. Bullock, Rochester Ordnance District, secretary-treasurer.

Colonel Kelly to Retire

Col. John R. Kelly, Inf., chief of the Northwestern New York recruiting district, was ordered into retirement last week at his own request. Stricken with a severe heart attack on 10 June 1941, Colonel Kelly, who is now convalescing and who will not return to duty before his retirement becomes effective on 31 Dec., took retirement at his own request rather than retirement for physical disability.

Beginning his military career in 1898 as a sergeant in the First South Dakota volunteers, Colonel Kelly served with that regiment in the United States and the Philippines and was awarded the Silver Star citation in recognition of gallantry in action.

Commissioned as a second lieutenant of infantry in the Regular Army in 1900, he advanced through the grades to become a colonel while he was with the 17th Field Artillery of the Second Division in France. After the signing of the Armistice, Colonel Kelly was in charge of arranging entertainment programs for the AEF. In addition to the Silver Star citation, he is the recipient of the Croix de Guerre, the medal of the Legion of Honor, the Gold Palms, and the Panamanian Solidaridad medal.

Nominations Submitted

The following nominations were submitted to the Senate this week by President Roosevelt:

Lieutenant Colonels to be colonels, Regular Army.

Raymond E. McQuillin, Cav. (temp. col., Army of the United States).

Edward H. Bertram, Inf. (temp. col., Army of the United States).

Hayes A. Kroner, Inf. (temp. col., Army of the United States).

Captain Chalker Nominated

Capt. Lloyd D. Chalker, USCG, Assistant Chief of Operations, was nominated this week to succeed Rear Adm. Leon C. Covell, as Assistant Commandant of the Coast Guard. Admiral Covell, who is slated to retire late in December, has been on leave from Coast Guard Headquarters.

Active Duty Allowances

To correct a ruling of the Comptroller General, the House Naval Affairs Committee this week reported S. 1701, designed to repay to retired Navy and Marine Corps personnel and personnel of the Naval and Marine Corps Reserves allowances, pay and mileage for their time and travel from their homes to place of medical examination.

In the case of personnel called to duty soon after proclamation of emergency in September, 1939, their orders were to report at medical facility for examination and, if qualified, to duty station, the comptroller held service did not begin until physical qualification. Orders then were worded to place personnel on duty before leaving homes.

To reimburse the earlier group, the act provides pay, allowances and travel from home to place of examination, and for those who were not physically qualified, provides travel from home to examination point and return.

The act was amended by the House committee to authorize pay for dependents from home to first duty stations. Estimated cost of the amendment will be $367,776.

Defense Contract Profits

Declaring that profits on Navy Contracts were in some instances "unconscionable," Chairman Vinson, of Ga., chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, this week introduced legislation limiting profits on all defense government contracts to seven per cent.

Questionnaires were sent to all concerns holding contracts with the Navy Department and to labor organizations affected by the defense program, Mr. Vinson said.

These questionnaires were sent in pursuance to H. Res. 162, which authorized the House Military and Naval Committees to investigate the defense program to determine whether it was being carried on efficiently, expeditiously and economically.

The returned questionnaires, Chairman Vinson declared, "demonstrate the most of the companies are realizing only a fair profit. Some even show losses." However, in some instances, he said, profits "have reached an unconscionable percentage." One contract, he said, resulted in profits of 247 per cent.

The Naval Affairs Committee, said Mr. Vinson, expects to hold hearings, beginning on or about the first of December, "going into all phases of the naval defense program."

Investigate Army Recreation

Telegrams are being sent to Army post and station commanders to ascertain the extent of recreational facilities made available through the United Service Organizations and other agencies, Senator Harry Truman, of Mo., chairman of a special Senate committee investigating national defense said this week.

Senator Truman declared that he and the other members of his committee had been astounded to note in their inspection of various newly constructed posts the almost complete lack of any recreational equipment.

New Navy Authorizations

Legislation, H. R. 5782, to authorize new projects for the Navy totalling nearly $300,000,000, was introduced this week by Rep. Vinson, of Ga., chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

The new legislation will not be pushed, Representative Vinson told the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL this week, since it is merely to authorize certain appropriations in the regular 1943 Navy Supply Bill, hearings on which will not begin until the next session of Congress, in January 1942.

Among the authorizations sought are: Fleet operating facilities, $96,216,000. Additional aviation facilities, $91,906,000. Fleet supply and storage facilities, $52,470,000.

Marine Corps training and housing facilities, $8,256,000.

Ammunition storage facilities, $16,893,500.

Training and instruction facilities for naval personnel, $23,508,000.

Hospital facilities, $20,395,500.

Radio communication facilities, $1,372,000.

Miscellaneous service structures, $5,700,000.

The quarters authorized to be constructed by the act will be limited in cost to the following figures, which include heating and plumbing apparatus, wiring and fixtures:

Permanent construction: Officers, $10,-

000; warrant and chief warrants, $7,500, and enlisted men, $6,000.

Temporary construction: Officers, $7,500; warrant grades, $5,000; enlisted men, $3,500.

Navy Construction

Keels for America's mighty two-ocean Navy are being laid at the rate of more than one a day, while launchings are but slightly below this pace, a Navy Department survey of warship construction reveals. Remarkable progress was shown for the month of September and preliminary reports indicate that an even swifter acceleration of the building program will be noticeable in the final October figures.

The tabulation from 1 Sept., to 3 Oct., showed the following:

Keels laid, thirty-eight, including: one aircraft carrier, three cruisers, three submarines, 11 destroyers, two coastal mine sweepers, one transport, three submarine rescue vessels, three tugs, seven submarine chasers and five district craft.

Launchings, twenty-six including: one battleship, two cruisers, one submarine, six destroyers, ten coastal mine sweepers, four submarine chasers and two district craft.

The battle ship that slid down the ways and which soon will augment the fleet was the USS Massachusetts, launched in late September at Quincy, Mass. The cruisers launched during the month were the USS San Juan and the USS Atlanta.

New Training Circular

Pending revision of FM 6-20, the War Department has issued Training Circular No. 58 dealing with the use and duties of liaison officers and forward officers—officers used by artillery commanders to maintain close touch with front line troops and to co-ordinate artillery fire with that of the supported troops.

The circular points out that command liaison is accomplished by direct conferences between the commander of the supporting artillery and the commander of the supported unit, and prescribes that these commanders should hold a conference in order to formulate a general plan of artillery support. The duties of liaison officers and forward observers are described in detail, with special stress laid on the importance of this type of officers.

New War Department Building

General plans and specifications for the new War Department Office Building, now being erected in Arlington County, Va., by the Quartermaster Corps, were revealed this week by the War Department. The new building, to be erected on the site formerly selected for the Alexandria Quartermaster Depot, will be a three-story structure of reinforced concrete. It will be in the shape of a regular pentagon, consisting of two concentric pentagonal "rings" of buildings, erected around a large inner court about six acres in extent, which will be fully landscaped.

Communications between floors of the mammoth structure, will be provided by stairways and ramps, with escalators in special places. Parking space for 8,000 cars will be provided adjacent to the building on the two areas. The heavy volume of traffic arriving at or leaving the building during the rush hours will be handled by the installation of a large bus terminal and taxicab stand in the basement.

Partitions, ceilings, and nearly all interior walls will be plastered. Major offices only will have permanent partitions, but offices of any size can be provided by installing partitions in the open office spaces as desired. The walls of the principal entrances only will be faced with marble and all toilet and similar rooms, with tile wainscot.

Transfer 4th Motorized Division

The Fourth Motorized Division will be moved from Ft. Benning, Ga., to permanent station at Camp Gordon, Augusta, Ga., upon completion of First Army Maneuvers, the War Department announced this week.
